There have been public firework displays in Britain since the wedding of Henry VII in 1486

Sky's the limit when nations celebrate

By Robin Young Britain has sent an un-contedly large amount of money up in smoke this week. The five simultaneous firework displays in London on Thursday night alone cost £50,000 and were said to be the biggest the Capital has ever seen.
Yet the firework companies say that jubilee spending on their products did not reach their expectations.

The Rev Rouald Lancaster, schoolmaster, clergyman, ama-teur pyrotechnician and fire-work adviser to the London Celebrations Committee, laments: "English fireworks are as good as any you will find anywhere in the world,

The coronarion and victory celebration fireworks may, in fact, have been larger than the

Humberside asks for 50-mile fishing zone

If negotiations for reciprocal shing agreements in such failed, the Government should poilaterally declare a 50-mile exclusive zone for Britain, Humberside councillors mid the House of Commons trade and industry subcommittee at Hull yesterday, when it contimued its investigation into the British fishing industry. When the chairman, Mr Edwind Marshall, Labour MP for Goole, asked if it was felt that the KEC had shown a lack of urgency over the plight of the industry, Mr John Town-end, leader of the Conservative majority group in the council, said: "There is a lack of urgency not only in the EEC, but also in HM Government. Society, whose 150 members have 35 boats, rold the committee that the distant-water vessel companies at the main ports were buying their way into the inshore fishing industry. They feared that eventually family boat operators would disappear, thus destroying the in-dividuality of fishing enterprise. Mr Thomas Coyling, vice-chairman of the society said a herring shoal 25 miles off Flamborough would once have lasted a fortnight. Now it lasted only four hours because of fishing by foreign vessels.

Pig farmers expect to be worse off

By Our Agricultural -Correspondent In spite of an EEC conces sion, pig farmers will be worse off next week. The EEC aid succeeds a British subsidy which has cost £17m, Mr Silkin. Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, said yesterday. The British subsidy, which ends today, was worth about £70 a tonne for bacon, while the complex EEC mechanism which will succeed it would be worth only £42. Mr Silkin considers the new and to be temporary.

"To establish fair conditions of trade a revised method of calculating the monetary compensatory amounts (subsidies on imports from the EEC) is needed," he said. He was banking on a favourable decision by the European Court of Justice in a case brought against the United Kingdom by the the United Kingdom by the European Commission; but it might not be heard until October.

In Brussels yesterday, the EEC pigmeat management committee approved a scheme whereby, from June 15, basic pigmeat prices in Britain will be eligned with higher EEC levels. That involves bringing forward the first involves bringing forward the final two transitional adjustments that would have taken place anyway on August 1 and December 31 next.

Wider protection of civilians and PoW status for guerrillas in amendments to rules of war

Geneva, June 10

The concept of sparing civilians during remed conflict has been strengthened, according to most of the delegates from 97 nations who today signed the final act of the diplomatic conference on development of international humanitarian law in war. The four annual sessions of the conference preceded by three years of preparatory work by the International Committee by the International Committee of the Red Cross—have resulted in two new protocols to be added to the four 1949 Geneva Conventions.

While the conventions rela-with the convenious reacted to protection for prisoners-of-war, the wounded and populations of occupied areas, the first of the new protocols sets out a modern code of combat law for the first time since the 1907 Hague Treaty. It provides for protection of civilians for protection of against bombardment.

The Icelandic delegation to the talks was led by Mr Einar Agustsson and Mr Matthias Bjarnason, the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Fisheries respectively, the EEC was represented by Mr Frank Judd, Minister of State at the Foreign Office, for the Council of Ministers, and by Mr Finn Olav Gundelach, the European Commissioner for Agriculture. missioner for Agriculture.

British fishermen, who have by far the biggest EEC interest in Icelandic waters, have been excluded from the valuable cod fishing grounds lying within Iceland's 200-mile zone since December 1 of last year, when a six-month agreement expired. Until then up to 24 trawlers were allowed in.

Ever since there have been hopes, increasingly tenuous, that the Icelandic authorities might be prepared to allow at least some of these trawlers to return to their waters under an interim arrangement pend-ing the conclusion of a long-term agreement with the EEC on reciprocal fishing rights.

According to a statement by Mr Agustsson today, the ques-tion of a return of British boats to Icelandic waters was not even raised in Reykjavík. Although both sides agreed to pursue their discussions, no follow-up meeting is expected before September or October at the earliest.

A terse joint communique issued here today said that both parties had " clarified their positions on a number of points at issue and that they hoped the next round of talks would bring them substantially closer to a mutually satisfactory agreement on the utilization of

Falangist dispute over true faith

Madrid, June 10 The colourful mural in the middle of Madrid shows three

By their side a worker ("the Spanish people"), wearing the tradi-tional beret with a spanner in his belt, is sweating profusely as he pulls along a block called "economic crisis".

At first sight the mural looks like the work of an extreme left-wing organization express-ing cynicism at the "bourgeois elections". Such murals were much in evidence in neighbour-ing Portugal after its 1974 revolution. In fact it was painted— as bold black letters in the corner reveal—by the Falange (Auténtica).

South Africa abandons | Soweto call interim regime for Namibia policy change

Johannesburg, June 10

In an important change of policy. South Africa today abandoned its pian to install an interim Government based on the Turnhalle conference in Namibia (South-West Africa) and announced instead that an Administrator General would be appointed to rule the territory until a Constituent Assembly

The announcement came at the end of three days of talks in Cape Town between the fivenation Western "contact group" and the South African Government. The move was immediately welcomed by the group whose spokesman said the appointment of an administrator-general could be helpful towards achieving an inter-nationally acceptable solution.

In the meantime Mr Vorster, the Prime Minister, announced that he will introduce legislation next week enabling Dr to make laws in the territory. The Bill provides for the President to appoint an Administra-tor-General in Windhoek, the capital. Mr Vorster did not indicate who might be given this appointment although it is expected to go to a South African. He would be closely advised by a United Nations-appointed Secretarist during the preparation for and holding of free elections supervised by the United Nations. These could take place later this year.

The abandonment of proentals for establishing an interim authority took place it became clear that it was not coing to be possible to bridge the gap between the Western view of how such an authority should be constituted and the ruggestions put forward by the Turnhalle representatives. Shorn of its diplomatic language, it is clear from today's announcement that South Africa and more especially the Turnhalle, have made substantial compromises in the face of Western pressure. Not only has the interim government idea, through which the Turnhaile hoped to establish its authority throughout the recritory before full independence, been dropped but there has also been dropped but there has also been acceptance by the South Africans that the United Nations should play a role during the elections.

For their part, the Western countries have been prepared to soft-pedal on Swapo and the United Nations' demand for an immediate South African withdrawal from the territory.

They appear to have accept that a troop withdrawal should be phased and orderly and that South Africa would maintain its presence in Namibia until an independent Government requested its withdrawal.

Energy fund proposed by Jamaican Premier

By Our Special Correspondents When relations between the developed and developing coun-tries were discussed at the Commonwealth conference yesterday, Mr Michael Manley, the Jamaican Prime Minister, called for support for the continuation of the North-South dialogue within a reformed and restructured United Nations.

He also unged the Common-wealth as a whole to support his proposal for the creation of a special fund of $5,000m a year for five years for investment in the development of new sources of energy. The money should be provided by the oil-producing and industrialized countries.

And this time there is likely to be a further quartel about how firmly the conference should declare its opposition to sporting links with South Africa—bearing in mind that New Zealand persists in retaining them.

in retaining them. In Ottawa four years ago, Edward Heath and General Gowon of Nigeria hit on a compromise formula behind a bush at a garden party (not that it did either of their subsequent careers very much good). This time the British are giving a party at the Royal Academy on the last night of the conference, so it could be there that the final deal is fixed.

A leader who failed to respond to the ritual question about Amin was Major-General Ziaur Rohman, President of Bangladesh. When he was asked it yesterday he replied: "Sincerely speaking, I do not have all the information I need to make a judgment."

The reply was quite in character with the rest of his press conference, which was possibly the least informative I have ever attended. A quiet-spoken man, with a military moustache and a terse manner, the mystery was why he had asked to meet the press at all. He said he hoped the confer-

New Thai-Malay swoop on insurgents plan

From Peter Hazelhurst Jakarta, June 10

The Malaysian and Thai armies plan to launch a joint offensive against communist sanctuaries and strongholds in the Betong salient of southern Thailand next month, according to South-East Asian military sources.

The operation against the remnants of the Melaysian Communist Party, who virtually control the strategic salient jutting into Malaysia's northern province of Perak, is expected to be the most vital joint attack against insurgent bases in the area this year.

past abrasiveness

From Norman Fox
Football Cotrespondent
Rio de Janeiro, June 10
England's and West Gérmany's paths crossed here moday. The world champions have just returned from Buenos Aires, where they beat Argenting 3—1; England go there later roday for a match on Sunday (7 pm BST).
The German arrival, with an enmorage of several hundreds, was somewhat more asspicious than England's in the dawn hours of last Monday morning and they are experted to attract 200,000 to the Maracana Stadium when they play there against Brazil on Sunday.
But England's standing here has still been improved considerably, in spite of a feeling of depression that everyone has had to fight.
This was brought on by the news of Ttaly's sound defeat of Finland. The players heard the result shortly before they went out to draw with Brazil but its significance has only just penetrated the satisfaction of a good performance in the Maracana. A few, though by no means all, have said
"that's it" and feel that Italy have too many advantages to be stopped from qualifying for next year's World Cup final competition in the country for which we embask tonight. Don Revie, who was is Heisinki, will be in Buenos Aires and will have had plenty of travelling time in which to think of ways of maintaining spirits.

At least he will find his players justifiably pleased with their showing on Wednesday. Local opinion is that England were far more composed and "continental" in their style than was expected and the Brazilian colleague who asked whether England were really as poor as I reported before arriving here now says I am too critical.

We shall have to see what can be built around yet another variation on an uncertain theme. Les Cocker, who has been in charge From Norman Fox Football Correspondent ...

in Mr Revie's absence, says he sees no reason to make more changes, though against Argentina on Sun-day and Uruguay next Wednesday avoiding defeats will not be the ultimate targets: Argentina are another South American mean under renovation. Their duties as hosts to the World Cup permit them automatic qualification but they are in the midst of a heavy programme of "friendly" matches against all seven of the visiting European mams.

Cesar Luis Menotti, the 38-yearOld manager who took over after Argentina were unsuccessful in the 1974 World Cup, has lived uneasily with the problems of losing players to Europe. Indeed, since 1950 he estimates the loss at 15 whole teams of internationals, but there are signs of an improvement uniong those who have stayed.
Of the 1974 team he inherited, Menotti now has only Houseman, the little right winger, and he has attempted to sweep away the abrasive attitude hast was encouraged by his predecessor, Juan Carlos Lorenzo. His only concession to a past reputation is perhaps in discovering a central defender named Daniel Killer. Most of his players rend to be erratic, although this year they beat Hungary 5-1 and Poland 3-1 before losing to the West Germans.
Although for England this part of the tour may be a rehearsal for a production in which they will play no part, the visit to Argentina is an opportunity to see whether the facilities are as well advanced as we have heard and whether the political foundations are any more secure.

the Scottish champions.

Iceland also have three players with Belgian clubs Geirsson (Royal Union Brussels), Leifsson (Charleroi) and Sigmvinsson (Standard Liège) and one player from Sweden, Toordarson, of Jonkoping. Invercangil, June 10.—The British Lious face another tough forward struggle when facy meet Southland in the eighth match of their New Zealand tour at Rugby Park here tomorrow. The Southland forwards are similar to those of Otago and Hawkes Bay—strong and mobile. They cannot match the Lious for size, and the British scrum may well be superior. But its Otago proved on Wednesday there are many more aspects to forward play than scrummaging. Southland will be led by Frank Otiver, one of the successes of last, year's All Block's tour of South Africa. Also prominent in the pack is Rutledge, a flank forward, who is a New Zealand triels player and could prove trouble-some for the Lious's hall-becks, Williams and Benyett. A local player, Stephen Pokere, will be at centre threequarter. Only 18, be is regarded as a fine prospect and if, he comes through tomorrow's match well he will be a leading candidate for the Maori All Blacks.

The Lious's injury problems have to a large extent determined the selection of their team, with Duggan, Evans and Squire still the only fit loose forwards. With the first international only a week away, somogrow's game is important for players like McGeechan, Gébon. Brown and Windsor. Tomorrow's match marks the end of a busy eight days for the Lions, in which they will have tackled Manawatu. Otago and Southland. Broome and Philco in tune for Vienna event

By Pamela Macgregor-Morris

David Broome and Philco, the grey American thoroughbred by On Dancer, coming into form at David Status, by Aston On Dancer, comi the crucial moment for the European show jumping championship in Vienna in two weeks time, won the Radio Rentals Stakes at the Royal Cornwall Show at Wadebridge yesterday.

Despite an encouraging forecast, the day of the Prince of Wales's visit was bedevilled by a cold wind, and unremitting rain fell from mid-morning on-wards. It was at its beight for the presentations, when Prince Charles, who arrived for his fourhour visit by helicopter, gave the Queen's Cup for the best light horse in the show to a bay two-year-old hunter, Gav Bov, by Mrs Mary Douglas-Pennant's stallion, Good Apple.

Gay Boy is owned and was bred by Mr and Mrs Burrington, on the family farm at Helwell, near Kenton, in the south Devon country. Gay Boy also won the Lloyds Bank in-hand champlonishin and thin qualifier for the ship and thus qualifies for the final at the Horse of the Year show at Wembley, the first hunter to do so thus far Broome qualified two of the six finalists for the Radio Rentals Stakes, and young Sarah Edwards, from north Wales, must have been pleased with her young horse Sherwood, who did well in this company nearly to achieve two clear rounds, only to be foiled at the last fence. Broome, who also had a pole from the last on Heatwave, finished in 36.8 secs.

Tony Newbury, who won on Tony Newbury, who won on Warwick the previous day, pulled off the first clear round on Snaffles in 41.8 secs, and Lynn Chapman was also clear on Rocke-fella, but took a temb of a second longer in doing so. Kolbe says that he is going to refire

From Jim Railton Ratieburg, june 10

Peter-Michael Kolbe (West Cermany), the 1973 European and 1975 world champion in single sculls, announced today that he will renne after the Ratzeburg Regatta this weekend. This follove his surprise defeat in the Compie Regatta in Montreal when he finished second to the Flying Flan " Perti Karppinen, of Fittland. Since that disastrous result Kolbe has won at Mannheim to begin this 1977 season but two weeks ago at Saltagitter near Hancover he lost to Timothy Crocks, of Britain. Kolbe complained at the time that he suffered from a back injury.

Kolba, who won the West Ger-man sportsman of the year award ahead of Frant Beckenbauer, the ahead of Frant Beckenbauer, the footballer, last year, is somewhat of a troublesome "kind". In 1973 with an advantageous lane in Mostow he won the European title. The following year he abandoned the single sculls event—"the name of the loner"—and won a bronze medal in coxed fours. In 1973 he won the world champlonship on his return in single sculls.

Pur as least Britain has been

Bur, at least. Britain has been But, at least. Britain has been alread over Kulbe's intentions in psychological terms with the withdrawal today of Crooks from this weekend's regatta. Crooks is by no means a nawcomer to international sport with a fifth place in the double sculls in the 1972 Munich Olympic Regatta and a aliver medal in 1974 and 1976 in international rowing. Crooks, too, is playing it cool, in what after all must be described as a pure psychological game.

The entries here seem to indi-

The entries here seem to indicate sumething of a menopause in international rowing following the Olympic regatta in Montreal. Britain has entered almost 20 crews for each day of the two-day regatta. For any hope of a reasonable chance in the international championships later this tional championships later this year in Amsteriam him plants are required. Particular attention will focus on the British national eight designate here who, among others, will meet an Irish club police crew. The Bridsh Eight, if they are to continue in their present form, must sweep the Irish threat well away tomorrow.

Trillion well prepared by Mathet

French Rocing Correspondent Paris, June 10 The Prix de Diane is certain to be run on soft ground at Chantilly on Sunday. Thirteen fillies will line up at the start and I expect the finish to read Trillion, Mad-elia. Gulle Princess and Beaune. I am selecting Trillion because I am selecting Trillion because I am sure the filly possesses the class and the stamina to last this 10½ furiong classic in what will be punishing ground. François Mathet, the trainer, whose Crystal Palisce and Concerning finished Palace and Concertino finished first and third in last Sunday's Prix du Jockey-Club, has raced Trillion on only two occasions. The American-bred daughter of Hail to Reason began her career with a win in the Prix Perruche Bleue at St-Cloud on March 19.

out-raced her 12 rivals in the event, over a mile and a half and won by five lengths from Lestrelie with Kelso's Niece third.

Although the distance of the Prix de Diane is a furlorg and a disposed of Beaute, although the Guile Princess is undoubtedly one of the gamest fillies trained in France. She thrives on racing and on her last appearance won the group three Prix Cleopatre at St-Cloud from Kalkeen and at St Cloud from Kalkeen and Absaroka.

Alec Head, whose wife owns Beaune, is confident of a good showing from her. Apart from her two seconds to Madelia, Beaune was third to Hartebeest and Kamicia in the Prix de la Grotte, Kamicia will revel in the soft going. She finished five and a half lengths behind Beaune in the Poule d'Essai des Pouliches and has yet to find her best two-year-old form. Last season she won her final two outings, the last of which was the Criterium des Pouliches, which she took from Doha and Orthid Miss.

Candy poised to land ment to François Boutin, the trainer, when fluishing down the field behind Trillion in the Prix des Tulleries. The Chantilly trainer expects an improvement on Sunday. Anyone comemplating Sunday.

By Michael Phillips
Racing Correspondent
The most valuable race at Kempton Park today is the H. S. Persse Memoral Handicap but sadly there are only three runners. John Danlop and Ron Hurchinson took this prize 12 months ago with Rising Falcon and now they have a good chance of winning it again, with Palmerston, who did well at Cagnes-sur-Mer in the winter. He was beaten two lengths by Assured in the Campbell-Gray Handicap, which was run over today's course and distance in April.

Palmerston will be meeting Assured on 3lb better terms this afternoon and must have a fair chance of getting his revenge. Yet I still prefer Assured, who could be the second winner of a good prize for his trainer, Henry Candy, and jockey, Phillip Waldron, in three days. On Thursday they took the main race at Newbury with The Tista; now they could be posed to land yet enother good catch with Assured.

I prefer Assured to Palmerston for three reasons. Assured beat this rival in April more comfortably than the bare verific of two lengths might suggest. It is quite possible that Palmerston was the firer and more forward of the two then after running in the south of France. My other reason for opposing Palmerston is that his stable has still to strike form, having been laid low by a tirps this season.

Tog Of War, the only other reason for opposing Palmerston is that his stable has still to strike form, has been laid low by a tirps his season.

Tog Of War, the only other reason for opposing Palmerston is that his stable has still to strike form, has two epic usses with Japsik at Sandowa Park show, but I am still content to row along with Assured on this cocasion.

Tag Of War, the only other reason for opposing Palmerston is that his stable has still to strike form, has been laid low by a tirps hills season.

Tog Of War, the only other reason for opposing Palmerston is that his stable has still to other the still prefer do now to be a good enough to clinch the first and and palmerston the last time they met. He is clearly better than that, a

On paper a toss of a coin By Michael Seely

On paper a toss of a coin decide the issue between Lark and Daring March, as ? March is now 51b better in March is now sib better in weights for a one and a half beating. In theory Daring should have the greater pot Trained by James Beth. Whatcombe, the cold is brother to that smart sp Daring Boy. Although he fit win as a two-year-old, Darin ran in useful company, plarly when third to J. O. at Newmarket. This year he a decisive victory in soft g at Salisbury before his seco Lucky Lark.

The going could well pro-

Lucky Lark.

The going could well probe the decisive factor this moon, as it was Daring Minability to quicken on the ground that caused his don at Newmarket. Unfortunately were few clues to be gain York yesterday. It was reduring the afternoon but runners were not cutting any appreciable extent. A deal will depend on what happened overalebt.

Michael Easterby's Lucky

bappened overnight.

Michael Easterby's Lucky is the ame-post favourite. It Daring March, the three-year path to success has follow humbler route, the Left heen defeated in malden before his surprise victor. Newmarket. But there have signs that the handicapper been underestimating the of these modest events. I Lark is reported to have we well at Flaxton earlier this and his shrewd trainer is on his chances today.

This is by no means a horse affair. The class horse top weight, Rings, was an im sive winner at Newmarket two-year-old. She showed sign fulfilling that promise the fourth to Boldboy in the Dulyork Stakes at the spring mean this course. Although per a little flattered by that run as the was favoured by the Rings is said by our Newms Correspondent to have pleasing Jeremy Hindley on Correspondent to have pleasing Jeremy Hindley on heath

heath
There was strong support terday for Michael Stoute's Therape, undefeated this so, with two victories to her cr in valuable handicaps at Lingt. Park. My Therape has risharply in the weights as a con quence. She is a speedy a consistent filly whose chance vie increased if the going becomes oft. Id a tricky contest I to the improving Lucky Lark to from Daring March and Therape.

Lester Piggott, who is without Therape.

Lester Piggott, who is withouted in the big race, has severanced mounts on his favour racecourse. He should take Vernous' Fillies Plate on Fallot, whose third to Triple I and Vaguely Deb in the Music Stakes has been given a boost the bold showing of those fillies in the Cake. Percour the bold showing of those fillies in the Oaks. In my first year, I seldom came to London in the day-time, though I should not have broken any rule in doing so. There was a train from Paddington, known to undergraduates as the fornicator, which could normally be relied on to reach Oxford in time for everyone to be safely back in College by midnight. The extra twenty minutes which were allowed to us at Chaist Church gave one a pleasant feeling of security when the train was late.

At that time Oxford society was still almost wholly masculine. Nor only did the men very greatly our manber the women, as indeed they still do, but there was little social contact between them. sexuals must, indeed, have been relatively small, but they were very much in evidence. The tone was set by three or four celebrated "Queens" whose flamboyant appearance whose flamboyent appearance was joined in amirice by a studied formality of manner. Many of those who paid court to them were not radically homosexual but were merely continuing their schoolboy practice of using boys as substitutes for girls, Others were just subscribing to the current fashion. Its influence was so powerful that one was almost made to feet guilty for not following it. It was a little like being Andre Gide's friend of whom he said: "Bêbê est vicieux, Il sime les femmes." I was, however, thought to have was, however, thought to have a sufficient excuse, Renée was so conspicuously attractive that my being seen with her rather increased than diminished my social credit.

own societies, of varying degrees of smarmess and frivolity. Among those to which I belonged at Christ Church was the Essay Society, which demanded a fairly high stand-ard of contributions from its members, and a play-reading society which concentrated on the contemporary theatre. little more than summarize their arguments. In recent years the Jowett Society has served mainly as a means for undergraduates to supplement their tutorials by listening to debates between dons, but at that time, though outside speakers were occasionally in-vited, most of the papers were presented, and the discussions opened, by the junior members opened, by the junior members themselves, Any undergraduate could become a member, on payment of a small subscription, by attending a meeting as a guest and taking part in the discussion. Once I had been admirted to the society, I attended its meetings regularly and eventually became its secretary.

An outside speaker An outside speaker who offered to address the Society while I was secretary was J. W. Dunne, author of two books. An Experiment with Time and The Serial Universe, which auxacted a great deal of attention in their day. They were responsible, among other things, for the alteration in the ordinary time-sequence of the events in at least one of J. B.

from the premise that dreams that from the premise that dreams frequently pre-cognitive, he illogically argued that the events which they forestell must somehow be present to the dreamer. His reason for wishing to address the Jowert Society was not, however, to test the force of his argument but to shore up its premise. test the force of his argument but to shore up its premiss. The Society for Psychical Research had supplied him with a group of subjects who recorded their dreams for him, but the result of the experiment had been negative. The dreams could not be plausibly interpreted as foretelling any future events. Mr Dunne was disappointed but not discouraged. He accounted for the negative result by the fact that the subjects supplied to him had been elderly. "Age" he said, "lives in the past Youth lives in the future." And so he turned to Oxford for recruits. turned to Oxford for recruits.

I was happy to invite him and I was happy to invite him and organized a meeting at which I alone was present. I had forgotten to send out any notices and he forgot to come. We tried again with better fortune and Mr Dunne explained his theory to a sceptical but friendly audience. He advised to the the heat way.

Later, when I had would take us several hours to write it all down. Since it seemed to me that this would seemed to me that this would interfere unduly with my work, I declined to join the company of dreamers, but I agreed to collect their reports and inform Mr Dunne if any of the dreams appeared to have been pre-cognitive. In spite of the youth of the dreamers, the experiment again had a negative result. It is true that Andrew Wordsis true that Andrew Words-worth dreamed of making love to a girl to whom he subse-quently did make love, but this was too much in the natural order of things for anyone to count it as significant.

It was through the Jowett Society that I came to know Issiah, or as his friends then called thim, Shaya Berlin. We already had a slight connexion in that his father, who came from Riga, was also in the timber trade and knew both my father and my father and my father's pur on show, Isaiah hustled us away to the meeting, but this was the beginning of a friend-ship that has lasted for over 40 years.

One of the things that first brought us together was our common interest in philosophy. This is an interest that we no longer share, since Isaiah was persuaded by the American logician H. M. Sheffer, in the arche 1940s, that the subject logician H. M. Sheffer, in the early 1940s, that the subject had developed to a point where it required a mastery of mathematical logic which was not within his grasp: thereafter he chose to cultivate the lusher field of political theory. His approach to philosophy had indeed always been more eclectic than mine and more critical than constructive. In our frequent discussions, his part was usually to find unsars-werable objections to the extravagant theories that I extravagant theories that I advanced. He once described me to a common friend as having a mind like a diamond, and I think it is true that within its mirrower range my intellect is the more incisive. On the other hand, he has always had the readler wit, the more fertile imagination and the greater breach of learn-ing. The difference in the working of our minds is matched by a difference in temperament, which has some-times put a strain upon our friendship. I am more resilient, more reckless and more intolerant; he is more mature, more expansive and more responsible. At times he has found me too thearrical and been shocked by my sensual self-indulgence. I have some-times wished that he were more revolutionary in spirit. I credit us both with a strong moral sense, but it expresses itself in rather different ways.

It was a feature of Isaiah's active imagination that he liked to identify his friends with instorical personages or characters in fiction. It often seemed to me that he judged them more by the qualities of the counterparts whom he had found for them than by those that they actually displayed. At about the time that I met him I discovered the novels and essays of Stendhal and was so much taken with them that he pretended to believe that I had never read anything else. This helped him to see me as Julien Sorel. If I had to be identified with any of Stendbal's characters, this indeed is the one that I should have chosen, but while I found the comparison flattering in some ways, I thought that it overestimated both the romantic strain in me and the extent of my social ambitions. Though it might have been less plausible, I should have preferred to be identified with Voltaire. For a long time I believed that I enjoyed the distinction of having been the one to in-troduce Issaiah Berkin to Maurice Bowra, but I was mistaken. On the occasion of which I was thinking, when they both came to a dinner party in my rooms to which Andrew and I had invited those whom we agreed to be the most brilliant people that we knew. I am assured by Isaiah that they already knew one another. I met Maurice in my first term at Oxford. He had known one of Andrew's effer trothers and came to tell on Andrew when I happened to be there. Not long after-wards he asked me to a dinner party in his months of Wadham, of which he was then Dean I was shy and unused to the quantity of think that he pro-

Maurice was not the only don at that time to cultivate

don at that time to cultivate undergraduates but he was by far the most influential. He was just over thirty years of age when I first knew him, short and sturdy, with a massive head, small watchful eyes, and a resonant voice, delivering words like rapid muskery. At Cheltenham, where he was known as "Mossy" Bowra, he had earned distinction, not only as a classical scholar, but as a rugby football player, and one could imagine him scrummaging to good effect. His experiences in the war, when he had served for a year in France as an artiflery officer, he had served for a year in France as an arriflery officer, had made a deep impresson on him, but he did not care to talk about them. Occasionally he hinted that it was far more awful than we could imagine. As an undergraduate at New College, he had been taught by Joseph, who stafled whatever taste he might have developed for philosophy. His wit was largely of the order of Oscar Wilde's "Work is the curse of the drinking classes", an adapgety of the druer of Oscar Wilde's "Work is the curse of the drinking classes", an adaptation of clickes and quotations. So, he spoke of someone as the sort of man who would give you a stab in the front and of a girl who was clanging to her lover as a mouse at bay. He described Evelyn Waugh's trilogy of war novels as "the Wangh to end Waugh" and when E. R. Dodds, who had been a pacifist, was preferred to him for the Regius Professorship of Greek, he responded with "What did you do in the Great War, Doddy?" The delayed appearance of the coffin at the funeral of Humphrey Sumner, who had been Warden of All Souls, elicited from Manrice "Summer is icumen in". I do not know whether he gove any thought to his wilticisms but they were he gave any thought to his witnicisms but they were always produced with an air of spontaneity and made more effective by his style of utterance and the forceful personality that went with it. He was like Dr. Johnson, of whom Boswell's "noble friend Lord Pembroke" is quoted as remarking that his sayings "would not appear so extraordinary, were it not for his bow-wow way. In his love of gossip, Maurice did not spare his friends, but his satire was good-natured so long as he was satisfied of their loyalty. If he thought that they had be disloyal to him, or behaved in a manner could be very savage and unre-lenging. Otherwise he was gen-erous in giving assistance and advice. While he was not a meticulous scholar, the strength of his sympathy for the ancient Greeks relieves the piety with which he wrote about them. He read many languages and had a deep feeling for much of the poetry that was written in them, but for the most part the style of his published criticism is oddly pedestrian. His memoirs are livelier, but unexpectedly benign. He had a great gift for parody, which he exercised in composing lampoons. He was righdy proud of these verses and read them aloud to a have quoced. As this shows, I was never very close to Maurice, shough we were always on good terms with one another. He thought of me as gifted, going so far in his memoirs as to refer to me as a "young genius", but I had the impression that he approved of me more than he liked me. We got on well enough in company but when we were alone together there was a feeling of unease. was a feeling of unease. Behind his bravura there was a were only a few people with whom he wholly relaxed his guard. He had affairs with women, including at least one whom he wished to marry, but he was also homosexual and the homosexual strain in him was the stronger. It may have been partly for this reason that he sought the company of undergraduates, whether or not they shared this sexual laste. Nowadays the younger Oxford dons do not command the service, even if they had the means, to entertain on the scale that Maurice and some others used to do, but this is not the only factor. The Oxford system of education also suffers from the decline in the number of bachelor dons, who take an interest in the undergraduates which extends beyond the supervision of their work. No doubt there was a touch of snobbery in the pride which we took in being favoured by Maurice's notice. In some ways his example was not one that the more conventional among our seniors were was a strongly civilizing in-fluence even on those who belonged only to the outer circle of his friends.

Tell Me More (BBC1 5.45 pm). That talented actress and writer of children's books Nanette Newman, who was for so long overshodowed by her busband, film director/writer Bryan Forbes, adds a new string to her career bow by presenting her own series of six chat shows " with a difference." Well, she's berta-lasking than Michael Parkinson for a start ! Nanette tells me : " Mast well-known people are interviewed on television . about their careers, either generally or because they have just written a bestseller or finished a big film. I didn't want to do that. I talk to the famous about something that interests them as people, something away from their careers, something that perhaps many viewers may not know about." In this opening perhaps many viewers may not know about." In this opening programme, Nanette interviews actor Michael Caine about gardening. "To say that Michael is a dedicated gardener is the understatement of the year", comments Nanette. "He's the Percy Thrower of show business!" In another section of the show she will discuss weekly "some interesting or extraordinary aspect of living." Tonight the subject is: Left-handedness. Nanette talks to actor Kenneth Williams, who is left-handed, and to Peter Broom who runs a Left Hand Shop in London and brings along some items. Graeme Carden of The Goodies runs a quiz and invites members of the studio audience to take part. As no show invites members of the studio audience to take part. As no show of Nanette's would be complete without children, she weekly presents short interviews with tots. Tonight the little ones give, their views about the Queen. Guests in future shows include: actor/producer David Hemmings on his passion for magic, and comedian Les Dawson on the subject of hoaxes. It will be interesting to see if Nanette Nowman can do for chat shows what Angela Rippon has done for news reading. Certainly the teatine family slot in which she has been placed offers a daunting challenge. To be interesting and appeared offers a daunting challenge. To be interesting and entermining without being cosy, sugary or patronising.

Aquarius—The Sorabji Legend (ITY 10.30 pm). Russell Harty achieves what the music world has long said was Russell Harty achieves what the music world has long said was impossible—an interview with the 85-year-old recluse composer Kaikhosru Shapurji Sorabji at his bungalow down a cul de sac in the picturesque village of Corfe Castle, Dorset. For nearly forty years, until recently, Sorabji banned all performances of his music because he was not confident that there was anybody alive who could play it properly. Among his works is the world's longest piano composition, the Opus Clavicembalisticum which is in twelve movements and lasts for 21 hours. Russell Harty tells me: "I became interested in meeting Sorabil after hearing Youty Solomon perform some of his compositions at the hearing Youty Solomon perform some of his compositions at the Wigmore Hall—the first performances of his work allowed by.

Sorabji for 36 years. With the help of several people, including Sir William Walton, Sorabji eventually agreed to talk to me for fifteen minutes, but absolutely banned cameras. Before I went to see him, people told me he was a crosspatch and awkward and difficult and, indeed, to begin with his approach was extremely harsh. There was even one point where I thought he was going to throw me out. I said something, not at all derogatory, about Indians, but he blew up, saving: 'How dare you? My family was Indian...' and really went off the deep end. But he cooled down and later began to answer my questions. There is about twenty minutes of his talk in the programme end. But he cooled down and later began to answer my questions. There is about twenty minutes of his talk in the programme and, eventually, he did allow us to take pictures of him, which we show at the end. He talks very fast and is very opinionated." Appearing in the programme, which is introduced by Peter Hall, are Youty Solomon, Sir Sacheverell Sitwell, music writer Felix Aprahamian of The Sunday Times and Alistair Hinton, an expert on Sorabij and his music. This series of Aquarius marks the end of Peter Hall's appearances as presenter. He tells me: "When I took it on, it looked as though the National Theatre would be even further delayed. But now the theatre is open and operating and I have duties there to which I must give priority. I think there are four more programmes in which I appear." What are his thoughts, then, about art series on television? "I don't believe in bending over backwards to try and popularize art. I don't think it works to attempt to be everything to everybody or to adopt the attitude: Don't be everything to everybody or to adopt the attitude: Don't be afraid it's only culture. The things that win through are passion, enthusiasm and sincerity. We've had some astounding viewing figures on Aquarius."

♠ Screen 2—A Day In The Death Of Joe Egg (BBC2 10.30 pm). The film version of Peter Nichols's internationally successful. comedy which is being shown for the first time on British television. Scripted by Nichols, it stars Alan Bates and Jamet Suzman—and though it does not work as well on screen as on stage there is fascination in seeing a subject which caused so much controversy a decade ago:

Highlights of the week

● Monday Panorama—Under Survelilance (BBC1 8.10 pm) Talk to reporter Michael Cockerell about this courageous, exclusive programme on Czechoslovakia's Charter 77 movement and back there who could suffer. I cannot tell you how we made the programme, how we got to people or anything of that sort."

Certainly Cockerell and producer Adrian Milne have put together a revealing, gripping and anger-making documentary. It is the story of the Charter 77 dissidents and their attempts to present a manifesto of human rights to the Czech government (a manifesto which was published in The Times on 11 February this year). The programme shows Czech secret police carrying out surveillance activities on two chartists. There are interviews with some of the dissidents who talk about their beliefs and the risks they take for those beliefs.

Tuesday. Just To Be Alive (BBC1 9:55 pm) Sixteen months ago John Hall, a RAF pilot instructor whose job was to train other instructors, had a flying accident which left him almost totally paralysed from the neck down. He only has a little feeling in his shoulders and upper arms. This film, produced by Ramsay Short, written and narrated by Harold Williamson, is the story of Hall's fight, and that of his wife Ros, to lead as normal a life as possible with their two small daughters. Harold Williamson tells me: "They just refuse to accept defeat in any aspect of their life. He is in a wheelchair, but they go to dances and she dances round him. They talk openly, and quite beautifully, in the film about their revamped love life. They never moan. They have no self pity. I have interviewed a lot of people in my time but the Halls are different from anybody I've ever met. I've never known Halls are different from anybody I've ever met. I've never knowi

Wednesday. Dawson And Friends (ITV 8.0 pm). The third of four shows featuring comedien Les Dawson with guests which include Dennis Waterman of The Success! (whom Les teaches to be attractive to women), Freddie Trueman (who partners Les in an Irish cricket match), jazz trumpeter Humphrey Lyttelton, Lynsey de Paul and William Rushton. Les, who has been a comic for 15 years, tells me: "I very rarely work to a set script. I approach comedy with a writer's eye. When I walk in front of the cameras all I have written down is a beginning, a middle and an end. The rest I ad lib."

Deginning, a middle and an end. The rest I ad lib."

● Wednesday. Middlemen (BBC1 8:30 pm). First of a new series starting Frank Windsor (who played policeman John West for 15 years in Z Cars and Softly Softly) and Francis Matthews. The scripts are by one of television's leading writers, Alan Plater (who also wrote for Z Cars and Softly Softly), David Rose (producer of the original Z Cars, now Regional Head of Drama) directs this opening episode, but Ian MacNaughton (who directed the Monty Python series) takes over for the next five and a difference of style will be apparent. Frank Windsor tells me: "It has been called a concedy series, but Pd. prefer it to be looked upon as a satirical series. Comedy is associated with a laugh a line, and we are not going for that. The original conception was to bring together two men who were middle eged, undeille class misfits. I play a redundant executive. Francis plays a chap who has been fiving off his wars for years. We get together for survival purposes. The opening programme was made a year ago, survival purposes. The opening programme was made a year ago as a pilot, and all it does is establish the characters. In the 12-month interim the concept has changed from watching the characters fight for survival in an affluent society to watching them fight for survival in a crumbling society. It becomes tanted black comedy. All I'm saying is : Don't judge us on the first one. Stay with it for a couple of weeks, because the opening episode is not typical of the series."

When he at last got home, all the villagers crowded round him and Nasrudin gave them a blow by blow account of his experiences, taking care to save the best bir until last. "And do you know", he cried, "the King himself spoke to me.

When the people had run off to relay this extraordinary news, one child or other idiot hung back: "Please", he asked, "what did the King say to you? "" His exact words were: "Ger out of my way."

I do not mean to suggest that our own Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II., has been heard to inappropriate in the jubilation of the past few days—nothing could be more improbable—but radio has reported a certain amount of villager behaviour ro dramatists, it enacts and nowhere more marked, I suppose, than in the crowds who made sure of a front place outside St Paul's. Indeed the commentator gave substance to the supposition. He said :

Everybody is trying to say I spoke to the Queen.". There was more of this the day following in Radio 4's. Wednesday afternoon And then The Queen said ... which was a collection of reminiscences by collection of reminiscences by people who on royal visits up and down the country had actually conversed with her. From this it appeared that, for most, the astonishing thing was to discover that the Lady was human after all. Certainly in human after all. Certainly in anticipation one can sympa-thize: whatever can she be like, this lofty being T am about to meet, if not sixfoot in her rights and glacial? And what, oh what am I going to say to her? But then, in the event, she turns out small and smiling and she does not embarress you with bortomiess silences because, not only is she well disposed, but she knows her job. After the

Of course absolutely un-believable" has been the pre-dominant reaction to such fervid Jubilee enthusiasm although, as Ronald Butt reminded us last. Thursday, there were similar wild scenes in 1935 and everyone, nor least an austere and ailing king, was quite amazed. Is it really unbelievable, I wonder, that a country which in every other respect is very short of pageantry, ceremonial and the opportunity for a good emotional workout should grasp its rare excuses with both hands? If the monarchy did not exist, it would certainly have the country of the cou have to be invented. The re-actions of the contributors to And then the Queen said . . may sound a bit overdone, but they can also been seen as symptomatic of a wish. A wish for what? Something rather muddled, I suspect, something rousantic in which thing rouseric in which are mixed up ideas of honour and order and justice rather purer than those that is still symbolic. More precisel mirror: when, for example, the Royal Family's income or priva leges are under discussion, in mirrors envy. Oh certainly, we should all be equal and in a very real sense we are. But we shall never be equal in the en vious sense, because there is a yet no version of equality which archy acts as a perpetua reminder of that fact and i there lies a certain recognition Without the slightest doubt the most awful Jubilee broad-cast to come within my hearing was provided by Alan Melville's Radio BURPS. I heard it in my car in which, as I have probably explained before, I become a perfectly normal listener. Given the least encouragement I smile and even laugh out loud, but I can tell you that, had it not been for the restraining hand of Critic Wade, I would have turned this rubbish off within five minutes flat. And wish an oath at that. As it is Critic Wade and I have agreed that perhaps the occasion was all a bit too much and we should listen again. But the same occasion did not foul up another enterprise for whose success I feared: Clifford Hauley's and lan Gourlay's Oh Glorious Jubilee was that risky thing an improbable extravaganza, but Alfred Bradley got it off the ground and kept it there.

The best jubilation I heard was To Ride in Triumph, Roy Strong's reconstruction of, Strong's reconstruction of among other things, celebrations for the auniversary of the accession of Elizabeth I. We also heard how such celebra tions were continued in the less than golden times that followed under James and Charles. But even their comparative barbari-ties could not take the pro-gramme's glow away. Laurels to all concerned; not least pro-ducer and director Jenyth Worsley.

In method and structure, the new work does precisely what audiences expect of a concerto; arpeggios, enclosing a hearted dancing episode (Mr. Harries risks comparison with Tchaikovsky here): the finale is in rondo form. The soloist is well provided; each movement has a cadenza.

However, instead of a romantic big tune, Mr Harries centres the last movement around a brass chorale which acrs as a focal point in the way that Es ist genug does in the Berg. violin concerto. It brings to the concerto something which is lacking at other points; a sense of deeper purpose. There is a tonal centre of G, recognizable themes to sustain the attention of those usually suspicious of music before they have heard it, and enough flirtation with serialism to enable Mr Harries to resist the charge of

In Das Lied von der Erde Mr Mata never quite solved the difficulty of belancing the voices against the orchestra in Mahler's more opulent pages; Llandaff's acoustics poses special problems. Turning up the volumes

It started on a shoestring 19 years ago with homemade shelves and a handful of exhibitors. The Antiquarian Booksellers' Association had rented a room as the National Book League as common ground for country booksellers to meet visiting librarians and book collectors. The idea quickly outgrew its parochial beginnings and this year there have been fairs in Stangart, Oxford, New York, Edinburgh, Washington and Jerusalem. There will be others in Tokyo, Brighton, Dusseldorf and Chicago before CATALOGUE Library of Books, 1977 is out. The grandest of them all takes place each year in London where it all began. No longer in the cosy literary ambience of the National Book League SAMUEL JOHNSON, but in the marble half of the Europa Hotel, Grosvenor Square. This year's fair, from Tuesday to Thursday of next week, commemorates with a small and interesting exhibition the 400th anniversary of Drake's voyage round the world. It is therefore appropriate that both exhibition and fair should be opened by Mr Edward Heath in his dual role of sailor and heath collector. He also By Mr. CHRISTIE, O WEDNESDAY REDRUSKY 4. his dual role of sailor and book collector. He also redresses the political balance for two years ago the task was performed by Mr Michael Foot. By reducing speculation to reasoned deduction experts have developed the unfortunate habit of invariably holking for the most abstruse way to play the hand. They think of the key cards as in an adverse position, and prefer to play for a squeeze than to take a straightforward finesse, although in either case the odds in favour of success may be approxiof success may be approximately the same. It does not flower very well, but I know of other weeping cherries that flower splendidly.

Other varieties include the weeping birch, Betula pendula "Dalecarlica", and the weep-"Dalecarlica", and the weeping ash, Francius excelsion Pendula. There are the weeping lime, Tilia petiolaris, Cotoneaster hybridus pendulus, which carries long weeping branches of brilliant red berries in the autumn, and Caragana arbonescens. Pendula, which has yellow pea-like flowers.

Pendulous shrubs, too, can be most attractive. If you can find a weeping standard of a forsythia, or Buddleia alternifolia, which has long ropes of lavende lowers reaching from a six e. Fight feer stem to the ground, buy them. They are not all that plentiful, but if you can visit garden centres or

The forsythias, of course, are such a joy in the spring, and I would suggest that one standard forsythia neighboured by a weeping buddleia where you can see them from your dining room or sitting room would give pleasure for many weeks. Just as weeping trees can look so right in their place, so can upright or fastigiate trees. There are dozens of such trees and my first thought is of

They are slender enough for the birds beaks to cope with the flowered chercies seem to escape but damage, presumably because the buds are larger than the hirds beaks can cope

There are other fastigiate cherries such as Prunus hillieri Spire, and the mountain esh Sorbus "Joseph Rock", which has lovely autumn foliage and Fastigiata Aureomarginata is a splendid plant.

Probably the queen of all upright conifers is the golden Cupressus macrocarpa lutea, which was awarded a first class configurate by the Rayal Hor. certificate by the Royal Hor-ticultural Society in 1893, and it is still a wonderful confer.

It will grow fairly quickly to about 50 feet. The variety.

"Donard Gold" is considered to be an improvement on C lutea; with rich deep golden foliage, and is very fast growing—maybe the fastest growing so important in a garden. There are so many pleasing combinations to be made of upright, weeping, spreading, procumbent or horizontal trees, and shrubs. Time spent just hooking at the various vistes from the windows of the house, or from favourite sitting places, visualizing the effect of a tree or shrub in this spot or that, is well spent. As the army always said, time spent in reconnaissance is never wasted. The other day I reported that due to give a display at a Nigel Short had qualified for works club. I had given one the British Championship at there the previous year and the age of 11. He is now as a matter of grim fact, 12, which goes to show how quickly time passes. Who knows, he may reach manhoed before I breast knew that the opposition, if enthusiastic, was weak. This was the twentieth anniversary of the founding of their club and the plan was that I should the tape of second childhood. Meanwhile, and before these consummations arrive, I should like it Clearly understood that when I wrote that Nigel had when I wrote that right had beaten Korchnoi in a simul-taneous display I did not by that mean that he had quali-fied for the final in the Candidates series of the World Championship. Going from the sublime to the less sublime I am reminded of an occasion 20 odd years ago when an Uxbridge newspaper blazoned forth the fact that a local schoolboy had beaten Golombek, omitting to mention that the said boy had been accompanied by 29 other players against whom I played with some success.

I have always enjoyed giving simultaneous displays. It is an occasion on which one can try out all sorts of ideas in the openings and when one can ose with dignity, always pro-viding one remembers to win with gaiety. It is eminently suited for those of us who like our frivolity to be serious. The game of chess, like love, reli-gion and British politics, should never be taken too seriously.

Again, like last week, I feel I am letting down my collea-gues in that I have to confess there is nothing macvellous or mystical about a simultaneous display. Any master, no matter how minor he is, can give a successful simultaneous display, even against an opposi-tion that contains a number of fine players. :.

great as the onlooker imagines. his opponents who are in a complicated position will find they have insufficient time to give to their problems. Or, if he himself is in difficulties, he may exchange down to the endgame in which phase of the game his superior technical knowledge will enable him to gain the upper hand.

I have said I always enjoyed giving simultaneous displays, but this is not strictly true. There was one occasion when I sake of clistiked every minute of it. It tion. was one summy Saturday, more in a than 20 years ago when I was Union.

start play at three o'clock, adjourn at 4.30 for tea and present prizes to players who had won competitions during the year and then to resume finishing round about

Two things went wrong. One was that they produced only 16 players and the other was that I woke up that morning with toothache. The result was that I swept round the tables at a fast pace and had won all 16 games well before the time due for adjournment. I was never invited to give another display at that club.

There was another occasion, too, when I had good reason to be discontented with the results of a simultaneous display. This was abroad, at the Hague during the 1948 world championship Some organizers from Utrecht came to us (Karol Opocensky of Czechoslovakia, myself and B. H. Wood, the editor of Chess) and said they had been let down by three Soviet masters who each were supposed to give each a significance in each a simultaneous display in Utrecht. Would we take their places? We agreed. I, as the youngest of the three, was given the biggest number of opponents, I think it was 35. Wood had a smaller number and Opocensky, as a veteran, the smallest. We duly played and, on the train coming back to the Hague, we compared notes. I had enjoyed the occasion but thought that the souvenir of Utrecht we each had been The truth is that the handi- given was not really sufficient caps are far from being as recognition of the hard work we had put in. At this The simultaneous player can other two looked at me with a vary the tempo at which he goes round to suit the circumstances of each game. He may confirmed communist, had so quicken it up that those of been paid for his grouble. B. H. Wood had not been paid, but he had secured quite a number of subscriptions for his magazine. He summed it up: "You have", he said, "been exploited."

It is true, however, that playing abroad is a more serious matter than giving a display at home. One has the feeling that national pride is involved and that one must make a good result for the sake of one's country's reputation. This is not so easy to do in a place like the Soviet gave a display at the Aviation Institute in Moscow. In a short speech at the beginning of the display I said I had heard that this was the institute at which Smyslov had studied. And this turned out to be a merical mistake. Every time I resigned there were shouts from the spectators of "Smyslov! Smyslov!". On another occasion gave a display against eight picked schoolboys. Better pub grub and one was a charmeng all mone of a shop the set of th it puts up a "pub grub" sign.

It is probably safe to say that the great majority of this summer's foreign visitors who go forth into the countryside looking for a traditional British pub will know little of the niceties of ales, real or otherwise, let alone tripes, but will eagerly discover and exclaim at the historic and the absurd: to pick at random from the Good Food Guide's files, the 800-year-old spiral spaircase at the Church House Inn in Rattery, Devon; or "the ornamentation of about 40 chamberpots suspended from the picture-reil of the lounge bar" in the Red Lion, Boldre, Hampshare.

Bur both these places, like the others in this article, appear the others in this article, appear in our files because they have a tiny touch of distinction or honeliness in the food that other pubs lack: in Rattery, good soup end Freuch bread, vigorous mixed grills with smoky bacon and berby sausages, and coffee with cream in a glass: at Boldre, duck or in a glass; at Boldra, duck or pork chops in a basket as well as the usual chicken or scampi, home-boiled gammon, and hand-pumped Eldridge Pope, ales. Good pubs for the hungry, like good restaurants, tend to congregate thickly in some parts of the country (and not necessarily in those places that produce the best of our regional beers). What follows is an attempt to correct this imbalance by taking examples from nine counties, with an emphasis on summery localities.

from nine counties, with an emphasis on summery localities.

Willeymoor Lock (by car, turn left two-and-a-half miles along the A49, Warrington road, from Whitchurch, Cheshire) serves food to boatmen and others. At No 12 lock on the Llangollen Canal, it is best approached by water, provided there is enough this summer, or you may walk across fields or you may walk across fields from Wirswall village. The Woods' menu is short and simple but this evidently allows someone to cook chicken, scampi, plaice and thips conscientiously, and you may take a glass of beer (pressurized—Tartan, Double Diamond) or Grelic coffee at supplied Gaelic coffee at sunshaded tables by the waterway.

The New Inn at Manaccan in Cornwall is a thatched house 300 years old, and only a gentle walk away from Helford River and Carne Creek. The beer is Devenish, with well-kept Cornish best bitter from the cask, and the ham and onion pie with a crusty pastry is "worth travel-ling the country lanes to find", according to a visiting York-shireman. Crab soup, too, was a good bowlful.

The Swan's Nest, near Exminster in Devon, was a farmhouse until a few yes:s ago, when Joan Ash's hunband gave her a free hand to convert it into a free house (but all beers are pressurized). It now has a large L-shaped bar and and not surprisingly most of the food is bought in from local suppliers. But the quality of the turkey pie, cold brisket, crab bap with salad, and ices, is high, and the bar drinks are not overpriced, as so often happens in a house with any pretensions children, because a meadow in Gloucestershire could well stand for them all, since it has had what the landlord describes as "an unbroken licence for 500 years", and the nearby Roman village now be nearby Roman village now being excavated suggests the possibility that it has been a drinking site for much longer. Anyway, "a gorgeous, warm, soft wholemeal roll with a couple of pass of butter inside" encourages the thought that the craft of baking is not yet dead and it went yers well vet dead, and it went very well with home-made some and a smoked mackerel fillet with horseradish souce. The beer is Mitchells & Butlers.

Was Nasser drawn into a trap which led to the Six-Day War?

The third Arab-Israeli war was Sharm-el-Sheikh and the Gulf fought 10 years ago. Its origin is of Aqaba was blockaded.

Sharm-el-Sheikh and the Gulf United Nations documents, Rikhye referred just to United officer of the Sharm-el-Sheikh which in this respect are based Nations observation posts along camp 15 minutes to reply to on General Rikhye's reports, the Israeli border. obscure in a number of respects, and likely to remain so. And on one important matter where one important matter where about a possible declaration the documentary evidence is affirming freedom of navclear, a different version has igation through the straits and been widely put about and the Gulf, and some even less sained considerable credence, enchusiastic talk about naval gained considerable credence,

It concerns Sharm-el-Sheikh. This Egyptian inlet on the Straits of Tiran controls the entrance to the Gulf of Aqaba, at the head of which lies the Israeli town of Eilat. In the mid-1950s Egypt used her position at Sharm-el-Sheikh to deny passage to any ships bound for Eilar, so presenting a serious threat to Israel's hope of developing it as the major port for her eastern commerce. Thus Israel was quick to occupy Sharm-el-Sheikh during the Suez war.

In March 1957 she left it most reluctantly, and not until President Eisenhower had publicly announced that no state was entitled to prevent free and innocent passage through the Gulf. As part of the deal Egypt agreed that the United Nations emergency force (Unef), which was going to watch over the Egyptian-Israeli border (but from the Egyptian side only) should have an outpost at Sharm-el-Sheikh.

During the next 10 years the

During the next 10 years the Egyptian-Israeli front was re-markably quiet, and Eilat pros-pered. Bur on May 16, 1967, there came what proved to be the first public step towards the Six-Day War, when Uner's commander, General Rikhye of India, was abruptly asked to order the immediate withdrawal of his troops from the

He referred the message to New York, and two days later, after much diplomatic activity, an official Egyptian communication saying that Unef must be withdrawn was at once accepted by the United Nations Secretary General, U Thank. Within a few days Egyptism troops were reestablished at

There followed some rather activity to enforce the pro-posed declaration. But these questions were overtaken by Israel's crushing strike against Egyptian airfields on June 5, which began the almost equally one-sided war. For agreeing so readily to Nasser's demand for Unef's withdrawal, U Thant was subjected to a barrage of criticism. Most of it ignored the physical and political realistics with which he had been freed with which he had been faced and which, on one view, effectively left him with no choice.

Suprisingly, one of his critics was Nasser himself, who claimed that he had asked only claimed that he had asked only for the withdrawal of United Nations troops from the international frontier, but that the United Nations had insisted on withdrawing the whole force, including, therefore, the contingent at Sharm-el-Sheikh.

Accordingly, he was obliged to send his own forces to this vacated position and to blockade the Gulf. If the United Nations had not acted in this way Egypt would not have been drawn into the trap? which led to war,

This account was given to Anthony Nutting (who had resigned from the government over Suez) and to James Restion of the New York Times immediately prior to the out-break of the Six-Day War. It was subsequently expounded by Nasser in Newsweek and Le Monde, Last February Lord Trevelyan referred to it in an that Nasser's statements about Sharm-el-Sheikh were "borne out by United Nations documents and ... confirmed to me by General Rikbye".

Only later, did Egypt formally request Unef's with-Nasser was really making the improbable point that the Egyptian army was out of his control, his version of events about Sharm-el-Sheikh is quite unconvincing.

It is, of course, not impos-ible that United Nations officials falsified their reports and were preparing a trap. In his were preparing a trap. It in second avour to emphasize this view, Nasser spoke of "Bunche's War" (Ralph Bunche being U Thant's right-hand man). But quite apart from the unlikelihood of such prochinations by the United machinations by the United Nations Secretariat, it is hard to see so wify a bird as Nasser being caught by this ploy. Lt has also to be said that if Nasser did fall into a United Nations trap, his speeches in the last week of May, 1967, suggest that he found it entirely congenial. They give no hint of a man trying to get out of a dangerous situation. That there was danger in the new disposition of forces at Sharm-el-Sheikh and the conse-quential blockade was unques-

With the decline of political leadership in recent years, and the national decline which must accompany a failure of headership, there has grown—inevitably—a mistrust of government and of the individuals who comprise or may comprise this or that administration, allowing (thank heaven) for a few exceptions. The Oueen, in contrast to the Queen, in contrast to the parliamentarians is trusted:

How the Irish Question has found its way onto the television screen

In fact, the contemporary

Anyone who thinks the Annan report on the future of broadconfusing or muddled might spare a thought for Ireland, where policies and plans on the future of television broadcasting are now bogged down in near helpless confusion, the

which is-British television. On a visit to Galway, Dr Connor Cruise O'Brien, Ire-land's Minister for Posts and Telegraphs, and the Republic's custodian of broadcasting, chose St Patrick's Day of all days to announce the reopening of the thorny idea of importing BBC 1 to be networked simultaneously as the Republic's second TV channel. The move has greatly angered the programme heads. try's own state combine. Radio strapped on see-saws of indeci-sion on the second channel since the present widebased coalition of right-wing Fine Gael and the Labour Party came to office four years ago.

Dr O'Brien, long recognized as the coalition's most advanced thinker on forms of reconcilia-tion with the Ulster redoubt, then—1973—immediately went about a rather grand design for the free exchange of networks as the basis of future understanding, Northern Ireland to have RTE as a fourth channel, the Republic to have specifically BBC 1 (Northern Ireland region) as its official second.
Official second is the qualification to the idea, because most British TV channels, including both BBC 1 and 2, as well as the motiey of indedpendent stations, depending on where you live, are available across eastern Ireland and the northern counties of the Republic from their transmitters in western Britain, as well as from their coaxial links across Northern

Most of eastern Ireland has five-channel TV, a fair bargain for today's fees, which went up on April 1 to £18.50 for monochrome (from £16) and £31 (from £27) for colour costed only towards RTE. No fees or royalties are paid to any British stations, even though, and this can only be seen as "Irish", RTE is itself in commercial retailing of British station relays.

But the British Government, having the year before quashed Ulster's Parliament, felt the time was far from ripe for establishing a Republic tele-vision network across the simmering North, Undaunted, Dr O'Brien went ahead with the idea of simultaneous rebroadcasting of BBC 1's national net-work as RTE 2. The proposal debate on the ethics and the aesthetics of importing whole-sale the mirror image. sale the mirror image, cultures year by gunfire in a hospital and values of the country from ward, after she had tried to which the Irish were first to retire, the BBC in particular shake off the imperial yoke.

To prevent great forests of giant television antennae on new apartment blocks in the more fashionable suburbs, the previous and present govern-ments were forced to allow the developers to install master The move legally lat in relay companies serving whole neighbourhoods with a piped television service, better in many cases than the British get from their own stations. In the cities of the south and west, people protested that they, too, were entitled to multi-channel television as a civic right. They were not placated by plans by then move; ing ahead again for RTE to operate the second channel, because they said, it would merely double the agony of being forced to watch a diet of local culture plus an even thinner spread of the existing RTE channel's mix of low budget soap opera the B picture end American sit-com and

> The threat of 'television . candidates ' .

Before and after this turn there were threats in the "deprived" towns of making political issue of multi-channel television by going to the muni-cipal polls with "television candidates". As these moves might have toppled local Labour Party figures aspiring to nat-ional politics, the Government gave way last November and agreed that the Post Office-might beam the British signals across the country (beyond their normal natural signal reach) by radial dish at a cost of about £200,000 to be picked up by non-profit making local cooperatives.

This was the situation Dr O'Brien now seems to have reversed yet again in favour of adopting BBC 1 as overall second channel for the entire

There are even more subtle ironies in the Irish broadcasting situation. Under Section 31 of Dublin's Broadcasting Act, RTE is forbidden to interview terrorists or their front organizations on news or current affairs programmes. Fein. Most of her interviews ended with a host of unasked questions more noticeable than viewers out of the every day give terrorists the 600,000 set owners, opportunity of teatime appraisal pride and RTE won and discussion of their work, as well as directly informing their cohorts on the other side of the border, and more to the point the Ulster station's huge ghost audience across seven Republic counties, where the bulk of the country's 600,000 set owners live. That audience includes of course, the Provisional "god-fathers" in Dublin as well as work of their troops in the field, Even within Ulster's self contained context there is nowhere free media is seen daily reporting the attack on its own estate. Overall, the British broad-cast media in Ulster exhibits an ingrariating, forelock-tugging provincialism. The prevailing underlay of mood to nearly all interviews and discussion, case in the now static patterns of Hardcastle for radio and Nationwide for TV, is embodied in a perperual white, "but what about us in Ulster then?" Ulster Television, one of the poorer independents, made a profit of £380,000 last year on total revenues of £3m. RTE, on a licensing and advertising revenue from radio and TV totalling £13m, had a deficit of £300,000 at the end of 1975, its last return. UTV is noticeably a shade less provincial in the British context, and more Irish "national" in programming attitudes. It draws substantial revenue from the Republic's drink, food and rourism indus-tries, based only on Northern Ireland viewer percentage, while in fact it has a huge ghost audience right into the heart of the southern capital and into the Wicklow Hills be-

Dealt such an uneven hand. RTE can only struggle on in a tide of almost universal rejection, and harassed by the widening vacuum in government broadcasting policies. The station had just completed the metalwork of a new £2m network for the second channel when Dr O'Brien pulled the plug from under them on the ground that Ireland cannot afford it. His follow-up St Patrick's Day bombshell, delivered to groups of multi-channel enthuiasts from Galway and the other single-channel areas, now their teeth in silent rage, as well as not so silently wondering how will find the money for BBC 1 relay and copyrights, if he cannot find the money for RTE. The broadcasting unions, including, with delicious Irish piquancy, the seamen's union (riggers of scenery now instead of sails), will also want a good answer to that question. The deputy director of a semi-Irish policymaker, living in a fashionable Dublin suburb, confessionable Dubrin shours, confessed dispiritedly and with displayed guilt: "When I come home every evening my children are glued into the Beeb or ITV, and that's the way I usually leave it. I only turn to RTE when there is something. I must watch. I know for a fact the same situation prevails right round my neighbourhood."

Mercenaries: The deafening silence

At 7.30 am on June 11 last year the Palace of Commerce in Luanda buzzed with activity despite the early hour. In the newly converted hall of the building 13 mercenaries dressed in brown fatigues fidgeted as they waited for the start of their trial for taking part in the Angolan civil war.

A year later four are dead, executed after the trial. They include Mr Costas Georgiou, better known to the world in a few short months of notoriety as "Colonel Callen". The other nine, two Americans and seven Britons, remain in Sao Paulo prison on the outskirts of the city.

The disastrous episode which brought se men to death and imprisonment slipped out of public vision. Occasionally an actor from the drams will appear fleetingly and in doing so prompt some of the questions which still hang over the whole affair.

Not least of them is the fate of the men still in Luanda. Since their trial none has been seen by westerners with the exception of a Belgian journalist, sympathetic to the Marxist regime. Earlier this year she interviewed the men and her film reached Britain. Two weeks ago the families of the men watched the 15-minute film privately. Up to that point they had been relying on letters arriving in Britain periodically. But the film was taken before a coup was attempted in Angols, during which the prison was attacked One report afterwards said the mercen-aries were offered their freedom by

There was consternation among the favoured candidates when Sir Godfrey Paine, the RAF's Master General of Per-sonnel, approached the Hon Violet Blanche Douglas Pennant, the caughter of Lord Penrhyn, a Welsh peer, thus setting the scene for a cause célèbre whose repercussions reached into the 1930s and beyond. Here, indeed, was an example of women on the warpath, of the Home Front in the tragi-comic raw.

A surkingly attractive, ele-gant spinster in her late forties, Douglas-Pennant had plenty of not entirely relevant qualifications. A devout churchwoman, active on education committees and in welfare work for girls, a national health insurance commissioner for Wales, she had also made recruiting speeches for the WRNS and the WAAC. exerted without American help. It is President Carter's good will that is the new and hopeful factor in the current situation, his evident readiness to go on from where Dr Kissinger left off.

To deal, as the Africans demand, with the oil supply to Rhodesia, for instance, requires American help, for the multion for twelve years, and national companies will only respond (if they can and if at all) to combined government pressure. But the final decision whether to cut off Rhodesian oil lies neither in London nor Washington. It lies in Pretoria, for theoretically, even if the companies scaled down deliveries, South Africa could supply Rhodesia from its large stocks. However, that decision is influenced by the consideration whether South Africa risks precipitating an oil embargo of itself at this stage (as Dr Kissinger well understood). But riations must decisively to restrict oil supplies to South ge the position. If they Africa itself requires much more than the cooperation of the oil companies it requires the collaboration of the United States and Iranian governments—which in turn implies better relations than now exist between them.

It may be, as President Kaunda suggests, that Britain could twist the screw on Rhodesia a little more—by breaking the post and telecommunica-tions for example. Whether this would significantly weaken Rhodesia militarily is for military experts to advise. But cutting communications will hardly heip Mr Graham's efforts, and will certainly give Mr Smith's propaganda machine, working hard to bolster white intransigence, the monopoly of news that it now has not got.

Dr Owen's main task must be to persuade Mr Vorster, oil apart, that it is in his interest to put pressure on Mr Smith, whose latest remarks suggest that he is formulating new difficulties and demands. It must be asked if it makes sense at the same time to urge Mr Vorster to help with Rhodesia, and to utter new threats, and plan new boycotts, against South Africa

To take another example, the African leaders are reported to be pressing that Britain, and particularly New Zealand, must formally ban their citizens and sporting associations from playing with South African sportsmen on pain of African withdrawal from the Common-wealth Games. Even if this was conceded, how useful would it be in getting Mr Vorster to put pressure on Mr Smith?

Fortunately for Dr Owen's effort, it cannot of course be conceded. Mr Callaghan, like any parliamentary leader, can make no such commitment. He has no power to make orders, as Africans who remember "West-minster model" democracy should realize. The most he could do is to promise his Common-wealth colleagues to get his government to present a Bill to Parliament making all sporting contacts with South Africa actually illegal. It is most unlikely that Parliament would pass such a law and certain that the present House of Commons would not-because it would grossly abrogate individual liberties, and because the proposal would be seen as a presumptuous demand by the Commonwealth that British constitutional liberties should be currailed to suit African priorities. What frustrates leaders, perhaps, is not only that Britain has proved so powerless, but that guerrilla pressure is also so slow to take effect. Indeed suggestions that outside aid for them should be called in strengthens this suspicion. But the facts must be accepted and they point to a dual approach. The guerrillas are steadily, if slowly, making the Smith position untenable, while negotiations for a peaceful settlement to stave off all-out war in southern Africa can surely count on South African pressure at the right moments. The Commonwealth leaders need to be coldly calculating, not emotional and doctrinaire.

So we will have to resign ourselves to the eclipse of the elm-an environmental disaster of a magnitude which cannot, in the short term, be adequately assessed, or compensated for. Certainly the Forestry Commission, and many local authorities, are collaborating in public education programmes to encourage some understanding of this disaster, in the hope of inducing a readiness to embark on a major programme of replanting on hedgerows, by roadsides and in small clumps wherever the overriding dictates of intensive agriculture do not forbid it. Since such a programme will be costly, and will not show any immediate return in amenity value—nor ever an economic return-it will require continuous justification in a period when every extra pound of public spending is unwelcome.

But some longer-term good may emerge from the alm disaster if it brings home to all elements of society how necessary and important woodlands are, not just for amenity's sake but for the future well-being of the land from which we derive so much of our food, and as an import substitute to mitigate the effects of buying nine-tenths of our timber from overseas. Hitherto, Britain has benefited from the far-sighted planting programmes of wealthy men in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; now most planting is scape which suffers from this dearth of casual planting, it is the nature of the soil itself, and thus of the whole ecology of the countryside, since trees help to nutrify soil and to prevent the top-soil erosion which is already perceptible on high land and in 'some of the fens. A major psychological barrier has to be overcome by many farmers, who do not regard small scale forestry as an organic part of their operations—both because profits are not easily apparent in a period of intensive and profit-conscious husbandry and because they are not encouraged financially to regard them as such, since they do not receive similar grants and allowances for forestry machinery and plant as they do for other parts of agriculture.

If these two aspects of land use —agriculture and silviculture— could be brought together with a common attitude to investment, it would make a start towards encouraging farmers to regard tree planting as something more than an optional extra. An increase in planting grants for private forestry is to be introduced this autumn; but there are still aspects of the capital transfer tax which serve as a deterrent to any fully positive attitude to forestry by smallholders. Yet a pronounced and continuous increase in our native woodland is essential both for reasons of land husbandry and to reduce our economic depencarried out only for visible, or dence on overseas timber.

He states that Mr Merlyn Rees, when he was Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, agreed at Oxford From Major J. D. Sainsbury Sir, Far more serious than the loss of war diaries of home service units of the Great War, insofar asnothing can be done to recover the diaries, is the intention to destroy the records of service of officers

It is extraordinary that the Cowan report, covering the proposed change to a comprehensive system of education in Northern Ireland, barely mentions this fundamental barely menions this insolance and issue. Is it too much to ask the present Secretary of State at least to set up a working party now on this important, albeit sensitive subject? It would complement the welcome security package he has just announced.

No one is suggesting imposing shared schooling. Following the successful innovation at Fivemiletown and Limawady, my plea is only that it should be tried in other suitable rural and development areas for those parents who wish it for their children. I believe the extent of support would be surpris-ing and encouraging. A boy in Belfast said to me recently "I would find it very hard to shoot someone I had been to school with ".

I do not claim that integrated education is the complete answer to the troubles in Northern Ireland. but in the long term it must surely help and any attempt to bring the communities closer together is far better than no attempt at all. Yours sincerely, PATRICIA FISHER. Donaghadee, commissioned during the Great War.

Before 1914 officers' biographical details can be traced in the majority of cases through the usual reference works. Once the war had started the majority of officers were drawn from families that cannot be so traced. I have been privileged, after a considerable struggle against red tape, to be allowed to inspect the records of officers of the two units with which this Trust is concerned. I now know them to contain a wealth of historical record, but, according to the officials with whom I came in contact at the time, they are to be destroyed with the excep-tion of those of officers who were awarded the Victoria Cross, or whose court martial resulted in a sentence of death.

The Ministry of Defence must reconsider this intended destruction. If after all proper advice destruc-tion is confirmed, can these invalu-able social documents not be offered to county record offices so that at least the records of locally raised units can, if their counties are willing to make the effort, be preserved?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Liberal support for Labour

From Mr William Wallace Sir, Only weeks after the Liberal Party Council gave David Steel overwhelming support for the agreement with the Labour Government for the current session, a growing number of Liberals are beginning to doubt the desirability of renewing the agreement in the autumn, and to weigh the advantages of precipitation weigh the advantages of precipitating an election instead. The Cabiner's reported behaviour over the direct elections Bill has of course been a crucial factor in this shift of opinion; but it has by no means been the cruly factor. means been the only factor.
"Indecision" has been one of the most frequently used words about Cabinet discussions in recent weeks, on devolution, on pay policy and on industrial democracy as much as on direct elections. The impres-sion the outsider gains is of a government becalmed, with the left government becamed, with the left taking to the oars to pull it in their favoured direction and the moderates sitting around and wait-ing to see if a wind will spring up again. Certainly one has no impres-sion of prime-ministerial leadership. nor of any great effort by those social democrats who were so active in seeking the arrangement with the Liberals to press on their colleagues decisions which reflect the letter and the spirit of that agreement. Reflecting on the widely leaked accounts of indecisive Cabinets and discounts of indecisive Cabinets and discounts of indecisive Cabinets and discounts of indecisive Cabinets and disagreements among ministers, some of us wonder whether this Government has any longer the will to survive.

We agreed in March to provide support for the Government in order, first, to give it more time to sustain economic recovery and, order, first, to give it more time to sustain economic recovery and, second, to carry through a limited programme of constitutional reform. If the Government now fails to conclude a worthwhile pay policy for the next stage, and falters in its commitment to devolution and to direct elections, the grounds for the agreement will have ceased to exist.

I understand that within the Government the comforting argument is made that the Liberals will nevertheless hesitate to end the agreement for fear of an electoral setback. That would be a gross mission of the company of the compan setback. That would be a gross mis-calculation. An early election would certainly pose risks for us, though in a four-week campaign we might hope to recapture a good deal of the support we have temporarily lost. An election which was fought in the wake of a collapse of the Labour Government and the failure of its economic strategy would, how-sver, be a disaster for Labour. The electoral dislitusionment which would follow the first year of a electoral distitusionment which would follow the first year of a Conservative government might well flow massively towards our candidates, as a shattered Labour opposition tears itself apart.

My one hesitation about the sgreenent with Labour was that it makes as the control of the party of the control of the party of the control of the party of the part agreement with Labour was that it might serve to halt that party's slow decline. If the Labour Party is unwilling to save itself, there is no incentive for Liberals to support it. We have waited in the political wilderness for long enough; and if necessary we are prepared to wait a Exile longer, if the prize is to be the collapse of the Labour Party and the emergence of the realigned redical party for which we have worked for so long.

Yours sincerely.

Balance-sheet of EEC From Mr Edward Hillison

balance be struck.

I am 82, one of those, a dwindling number, who served in the mud, blood and human waste of the First blood and human waste of the First World War; who saw the failure of the League of Nations to preserve peace, and hence served again in the horrors of the Second World War.

There will always be an imbalance in the economics of the European Community until harmonization in all its sections is accommissed. Meantime one of its aims has been achieved; the preservation of peace in Europe. We had 21 years of peace between 1918 and 1939; since then we have had 38 years of peace.

then we have had 38 years of peace. Each such year is a bonus, paid for no doubt and whether willingly or no doubt and whether willingly or newidingly by an increased cost of living, but a bonus all the same for those who have had enough of war and value peace. Such a bonus will not appear in the books of Mr Jay and those other opposing protagonists; in their balance sheet there can be no asset "years of peace", because for them it does no measurable price. They are those who know the price of everythose who know the price of every-thing but the value of nothing. Yours faithfully, E. HILLISON, Clockwork Concordes?

From Mr Glyn Morgan Sir, In last Thursday's issue (June your Air Correspondent stated at "worldwide supersonic services should be commonplace by the turn of the century". There seems to be some confused thinking here unless the skies of the twenty-first century are to be full of clockwork Concordes

The judges and trade union rights

From Professor J. A. Jolowicz Sir, In an astonishing article which you have seen fit to print on the eve of the House of Lords bearing of the Gouriet case, Mr Jackson (June 8) was certainly right to say that more is at stake than a "parochial legal wrangle" over what he calls "the anomalous restrictions on the right to strike of Post Office workers". The case is sub judice. Lengthy comment on Mr Jackson's article would therefore be out of place, but can it be seriously doubted that what is at stake is the courts' power to prevent, or try to prevent, con-duct which Parliament has declared to be unlawful? The courts cannot initiate action themselves. The question is therefore, whether it is the Attorney General alone, exercising a discretion which may or may not be subject to effective parliamentary control, who can invoke the preven-tive or declaratory jurisdiction of the carts where no private action in tort is competent. This is, indeed, no," parochial legal wrangle": it is a question of the highest constitutional importance.

From Mr P. J. G. Elwes Sir, In his article (June 8), Mr Tom Jackson comments that few people have appreciated the significance of Lord Denning's judgment in the matter of the injunction sought by Mr Gouriet to restrain the Post Ofice workers from implementing their proposed boycott. One wonders how many people have appreciated the significance to the rule of law and the liberty of the individual of the line of argument used by Mr

Jackson.

What is being argued, in effect, is that it is wrong that there should be freedom to mount civil proceedings to restrain unions from acting unlawfully. "Wrong" in this context evidently means "contrary to upion interests". It is nevertheless reassuring to learn that an unlawfull act by a union, while illesal, may act by a union, while illegal, may not necessarily be criminal. Mr. Jackson expresses fear that the law is being interpreted in such a way as to jeopardise the statutory immuhity and protection for union activities that recent legislation has conferred. The activity the Post Office unions had in mind on this occasion was a boycott for political ends to be carried out regardless of the law of the land or the cost and inconvenience to the individual reliant on the services in question or the cost to the taxpayer of maintaining the services of the Post Office during the boycott. The final irony is the proposition in the last paragraph that the ability to restrain unlawful acts by unlons is especially reprehensible where industrial action or sympathetic action on human rights issues is involved. The present administration, on which Mr Jackson and his collections will no dealer talk to be a second action. colleagues will no doubt rely to introduce amending legislation further to immunise unions from the consequences of their actions, has already distinguished itself in this field with the consequences. this field with the appalling closed shop provisions which effectively deprive the individual of this free-dom to join or not to join a union. These provisions can be, and are being, used to deprive the indi-vidual of his livelihood without redress.

How can anyone professing respect for the law and individual liberties continue to accept this sort of special pleading and the dual standards it reflects? I fancy people generally would have more sym-pathy for trade unionism if unions confined themselves to the functions for which they were brought into being and pursued the cause of human rights within their own field of activity more openly and energetically, instead of looking around for others to smite at the expense of the rule of law and the public purse. Yours faithfully,

PETER ELWES, Cleveland House 19 St James's Square, SW1.

From Mr Walter Clegg, MP for North Fylde (Conservative) Sir, I read with apprehension Mr Tom Jackson's article on the Gouriet judgment (June 8). His charge against the judiciary is quite clear in that he alleges that "since at least 1906 the courts have devoted considerable judicial ingenuity to idestrable in the state of the courts have devoted considerable judicial ingenuity to be idestrabled. side-stepping statutory provisions enacted by Parliament". No more scrious charge can be made against judges than that they have over the years showed bias and made a the years showed bias and made a determined attempt to subvert the will of parliament.

Mr Jackson's attack on the judiciary is not the only one. Similar charges have been made by Mr Michael Foot and Mr Len Murray and all of them, significantly, before the Law Lords have heard the appeal on the Gouriet. canny, before the Law Lords have beard the appeal on the Gouriet judgment. Those Law Lords are thus being placed in an impossible position because if they find against 'the unions it will be for Mr Jackson et al one more proof of judicial bias, and if they find for the unions the remparion for these agrieved blas, and it they find for the unions the temptation for those aggrieved would be to believe that the courts had bowed to union criticism. I do not believe the Law Lords will decide the issue on those terms but will do right as their oaths require them to do.

them to do.

The judiclary is singularly illequipped to defend itself against charges of bias, but surely the time has come for the Lord Chancellor, as head of the legal system, to speak out in defence of the judges or if he believes there is a prima facie case of bias to set up an inquiry which will consider whether these charges are justified.

these charges are justified.
It does seem from Mr Jackson's article that he wishes trades unions to be able to act unlawfully, save in the sease of the criminal law, not only in direct industrial dis-putes but "in sympathetic action or industrial action on human rights.". If the courts are to be excluded from acting in these spheres then the power of the unions will be enhanced to a point where it would be beyond all control. It is fromic that the trades unions who want these immunities have demanded and obtained from Parliament legal sanctions by the score against employers and those who disagree with trades union membership.

WALTER CLEGG, House of Commons.

St Alban and St George

From Dr Graham Webster Sir, A strange feature of the correspondence about Albanus the first Christian martyr in Britain has been the suggestion that he would not be a worthy patron saint since he was not English. But why should a British patron saint have to be a recent Teutonic migrant whose folk came here only about thirteen hundred years ago? Far better surely to have a true Briton to represent our country?
The precise date and origin of Alban are not known, since the date of 209 is no more than a guess. There was very little active perse-cution of Christians under the Severi and the period of Diocletian is more likely. Indeed, the action of the "Caesar" in ordering the persecution to cease could apply to the tolerant Constantius was was Caesar in the West in 303 when the troubles began. If Alban was a soldier he could have come from anywhere in the Empire although, ironically enough, by the early fourth century he would probably have been of Germanic extraction, the apparent essential prerequisite of some of your correspondents. All we can be sure about is that he was a real person whose tomb was venerated in the fifth century, that he was the first martyr in Britain, and that, according ing to Gildas, he gave his life to protect a friend. Surely one needs no more qualification than this for a national Christian hero; far better than the shadowy St George with his debious exceedents and strong

Long to reign over us From Mr P. W. Montague-Smith

Sir, The same semiments expressed by Dr Noble Frankland (June 9) that the Queen should never abdicate the throne have been answered by the Queen herself in her excellent speech at the Guildball on June 7. After referring to the pledg-ing of her life to the service of her people which she made at the age of 21, she concluded "I do not regret nor retract one word of it" In the thousand years of monarchy since Alfred the Great, the only sowereign to key down his kingship vokuntarily was King Edward VIII. Playwright and critic

From Mr William Douglas-Home Sir, Having had three plays pro-duced in London during the last three months—two having been caught on the barbed wire and riddled with critical cross-fire and now decently interred the rhird a success—I find myself in the unique position of being able to comment on the critics without either patronage or bitterness. With your permission, I would like to start on

For some years now I have noticed with increasing though admittedly amused concern that he has been hanging his reviews of my plays on a kind of class-conscious, social-political coat-hanger which does as much damage to his reputa-tion as a critic of the arts (if that is what he aspires to be) as it does to the initial reputation of my plays until the public have had time to make their own assessment if, indeed, they get the time.

Some years ago, in his review of Lloyd George Knew My Father, he confessed to this bias when he wrote, "It is the lot of entertainment plays to be criticized for social content. A year or two later, still true to this curious and self-imposed directive, he reviewed The Dame of Sark as follows: "There is Sark itself, in which the sampling place structure will crumbling class-structure still flourishes. Then, there is the war which comes over as a well-bred affair." This dictim being based on the fact that the German Commandant happened to be called Count von Schmettau, appointed not by me, but by the German High Command !

Then, this year, reviewing the first of my trilogy, he described the over-taxed playwright therein as an "elite artist" for all the world as though every adult citizen of this country, elite or otherwise, were not suffering from over-kill taxation. The second play, thank God, he did not review, but left it to one of his more open-minded understudies. Otherwise, no doubt, with the leading character called Sr Cecil (knighted for service to literature) and the leading ladv colled Lady Townsend (her husband having been pushed upstalrs for some damned crookery herween "some damned crookery between the wars", according to Sir Cecil) and with an aged retainer as Sir Cecil's kick-off, he must inevitably have spotted some dastart'y attempt on my part to reverse the Abolition of the Slave Trade Act in favour of the "elite" upper classes.

Finally, in his review of the third pley, he wrote "Mr Dougles-Home has inevimbly been drawn to the subject of Rolls-Royce as a surviving relic of the old British class structure and his treatment of the two parmers is designed to show the operation of the gentle-men's club". Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear! It is not my place to suggest what you, Sir, should do with him—only to ask myself what I can do about him.

For, laughable as it may seem, honestly believe that, if I were to put on a play about Debenham and Freebody, he would hinge his review on the fact that Debenham's sister married a bisbop while Free-body's aunt settled for the captain of a Channel Ferry steamer (if, in-deed, they did) and accuse me of writing a propaganda play in favour of the Established Church at the expense of the Merchant Navy, always assuming that the Merchant Navy, as an old-established institution, merits his sup-port, which I take leave to doubt i I am, Sir, yours sincerely. 25 years ago Don to Volga

From The Times of Wednesday, June 11, 1952 June 11, 1952

The meeting of the waters of the Voiga and the Don through the newly completed cannt that links the two great rivers fulfils an ancient dream of the Russian people. The work—begun before the war, interrupted, resumed and, in 1950, accelerated—is an outstanding engineering achievement. Over 60 miles long, the canal joins the river systems of the Elack Sea bosin with the navigable rivers of the Volga and northment basins and links the White. Battle and Caspian seas with the Sea of Arov and the Black Sea. By the creation at the Don end of the canal of the huge reservoir of Tsymlyansk, the level of water in the river will be raised by over 90 feet

"I believe in one God." To whom are the words of the creed addressed? Not, as in the Lord's Proyer, directly to God himself, since God appears as the object of the verb. And not, or not primarily, by one believer to another. That is perhaps clearer in most Greek versions of the creed, which begin with the plural: "we believe". Historically, the Christian creed was addressed to the heretic or to the cata-chumen, to someone who has partial belief, or who has ceased to believe, or to someone who does not yet believe.

This is explicit in some early

Christian and Gnostic creeds, which begin with the impera-tive: "Believe ...". It is per-haps plainest in the early in-terrogatory baptismal creed: "Do you believe ...?"

This address to the non-believer, or to the Christian in so far as he is unbelieving, implies a distinction between behef and knowledge. The non-believer is not accused of ignorance, as though belief in Christ were part of our com-mon knowledge of the world, and could therefore be

Oceanography: Tracking icebergs

The tracking of icebergs, which are a serious hazard to North Atlantic shipping, particularly off the coast of Newfoundland, may be made easier by information from a series of photographs of a tabular iceberg in 1911, the United States Coast Guard Service has run an International Ice Patrol whose job iceberg sighted in May, 1976.

New call to cut rates for empty

Local authority powers to charge full rates and penal surcharges on empty buildings are "discriminatory and unfair", according to the British Property Federation.

In a memorandum sent yesterday to Mr Shore, Secretary of State for the Environment, the BPF calls for changes in the law limiting the maximum rate charge for empty property to 25 per cent and abolishing surcharges on unoccupied com-mercial buildings.

Empty rate legislation dates from 1967, when local authorities were empowered to charge up to half rates on unoccupied properties. In 1974 these powers were extended and authorities have since been able to levy a full rates charge on any building empty for more

With an eye to the contro-yersy surrounding Centre Point, Mr Harry Hyans' ever-empty office tower, the Government added mandatory surcharges to the rates bill of commercial properties unoccupied for over six months. The surcharges involve a doubling of the rates bill in the first year, trebling the next, quadrupling in the third year

When he introduced this sur-charge Mr John Silkin, the then Minister for Planning and Local Minister for Planning and Local Government, commented that "the keeping of commercial property vacant with the inevitable result, at present, of an increase in capital values was an affront to society that warranted some penalty".

These surcharges are "no langer releasent" save the RPF longer relevant", says the BPF. It believes that they are applied indiscriminately, hitting property owners who have no intention of "deliberately holding back property to catch a rising market".

The Federation comments on the "impropriety of using the rating system for imposing a penalty", particularly since there is no provision for appeal against the charge through the

The advertising is only to protect the group against the surtect the group against the sur-charge EPC also reports that it has paid £460,000 in rates on those empty buildings. Other evi-dence to the Federation shows that last year National West-minster Bank paid £232,000 rates on 264 empty properties and Barclays Bank paid £243,000 on 368 premises.

on 368 premises.
The BPF wants the rares period for empty buildings to be extended from three to rive months to allow adequate time for owners who are refurbishing buildings. The Federation argues that in no case should emoty rates exceed 25 per cent.

This is an aggressive and discounties.

There is, after all, a limit to the extent to which one man, the Chancellor of the Exchequer apart, can exercise any significant influence over intert rates. Mr Stow is much more interested in those areas where he can exert an active influence over events and in his book there is no area more crying out for this form of intervention than the societies' relationship with central government. He is a passionate believer in the role of the joint advisory committee—the regular forum and political bravado, it would where building society leaders still be quite remarkable for a relevant ministries (Treasury and Environment particularly) meet to exchange views-but feels at present that the part-nership is a little one-sided.

The government has asked for and received a great deal of cooperation from the building societies, but in Mr Stow's opinion the government has not reciprocared by beloing the societies on issues.

"We want the government to understand that we have got problems," he says, adding rather ominously that "we requests which the societies have made to the Government which have so far evoked no response. And they are requests which will not only ease the lot of building society managers but also those of building society members, the investing and borrowing public.

Head of the list in Mr Stow's opinion is the abolition of stamp duty—which is virtually a straight capital tax on property at the point of conveyance. If this tax were abolished it would, says Stow, ease house

The second important suggestion is that the £25,000 limit on tax relief should be increased in line with inflation. This cutoff point for mortgage interest relief was introduced in March, 1974, since when there has been no move to raise the threshold albeit that indexation, in a few other areas, has begun to creep

Two other areas in which the societies are under attack are so-called "red-lining" where societies are accused of not lending at all within certain city quarters; and the inner multiplicity of branches and societies.

Although it is open to questise red-lining in its strictest sense, there are some inner they are more than justified in not lending—if only to protect the borrower from the folly of own actions. Lending more and more on older properties, however, does indicate how much further along the road of

The criticism about the number of building society branches he tends to dismiss by quoting the number of betting hops and shoe shops there are in the country, four times the number of building society offices. Regarding the number of societies, he has some prac-tical ideas as to how the number could be reduced. "I would like to see the de-

At the moment, once the engagements of a smaller society have been transferred, it can no longer trade under they wi its old name. Again, this sugges-tion would require government attention although it is not on mittee.

Now that the moragage interest rate is to come down again (this time to 10.5 per cent) it seems likely that the searchlight will swing away from building societies. But they will be active behind the scenes, particularly through the aegis of the joint advisory committee.

Mr Stow is an aggre as the rights of building ties and what is more determined that they si not be seen by anyone, les all the government, as "a touch ".

Taxation: readers ask

Capital gains and losses

column has been devoted exclusively to the annual chore of filling in the tax return. As a result readers' letters have been sadiy neglected. I shall try to make amends by dealing with as many as space permits during the next few Saturdays. This week I want to give priority to the questions which have arisen from the tax return articles. On the subject of capital gains one reader would like to know more about tine tax rate. He has read the Inland Revenue literature and says: "It seems to me that if imum 30 per cent, at which the gain is under £5,000 tax is point the filst rate automatisays: "It seems to me that if chargeable at half the standard rate, but if the gain is £5,000 or over in any one year the race rises to 30 per cent. Would you please explain if I have read the return correctly?"

No, not quite. The reader is referring to the alternative grateful if you could give me a method of calculating the tax reference to the tax law which which can be used if it results in a lower liability than the flat 30 per cent. What happens is that on galos up to £5,000 one half is reasted as invest my very old mother and upon ment income (the other half is her death it will be sold, and not taxable). On gains over in all probability there will be ment income (the other half is not uscable). On gains over in all probability there will be £5,000, £2,500 plus the whole of the excess over £5,000 is regarded as investment income. The total is liable at the individual's top rates of tax and to investment income sur-

In the majority of cases it is only when the combined top tax rate and investment in-come surcharge reaches 50 per cent that the alternative basis ceases to be beneficial. The upshot is that the alternative basis can produce a liability on the full gain ranging from nil (if personal allowances exceed Still on capital gains a total income) up to a max-reader refers to the sale of a

Again on the question of capital gains a reader mentions the reference I made to the exemption on the sale of a second house occupied reat free by a dependent relative. He writes: "I would be most house where it has been agreed that capital gains tax is payable on £276 as a result of part business use. He adds:

"I am wondering if it (the assessment) can be resisted under section 51 of the Finance Act 1976 where relief is given for any chargeable gains arising in any one year which total less than £1,000."

Alas it cannot. The misun-derstanding of the lew on this point is a common one. The small disposels relief (as it is often called) applies where the proceeds (net of expenses) is proceeds (net of expenses) is £1,000 or less, and not the gain. Presumably the proceeds apportionable to the business use will, in this particular case, be well above the £1,000 limit and is therefore outside the exemption.

The final query on capital gains raises a different aspect of the small disposals relief. The reader questions whenher loss relief can be claimed against gains in future years where the proceeds are below the £1,000 limit.

The answer is that it canprovided there is an overall loss. In other words it is sary to calculate the gain or loss on each asset, where there is more than one falling within the £1,000 exemption, as only the losses in excess of the gains may be carried forward. Turning to income tax, a reader asks: "When calculating the costs of running an office at home and finding the costs by the number of rooms do you include kitchens and bathrooms, etc in the number of rooms, or simply bedrooms and living rooms "? There are no specific rules on this one, but the normal practice is to ignore kitchens, bathrooms and lavatories.

Fixed interest investment

Autumn may be the time for gifts but what to do with your money now

Life for those investors who want to tuck their money away for secure income is somewhat problematic at the moment. Why? Well, because interest why? Well, because interest rates have plainly stopped falling, and are showing a tendency to rise; so there are strong arguments for waiting a while to see whether it's possible no get a better return later on.

To be sure, the building societies have just put their rates down again. But that I rates down again. But that, I regret to say, is taken by the cognoscente as an infallible sign that other interest rates will rise, for the building societies have acquired themselves an unenvisible reputation for manufactures that for unfortunate timing.

And though those minimum lending rates and the coupons on local authority negotiable bonds were unchanged last week, the latter at least are now well up on the level they bit a month ago. So are the rates on cerdificates of deposit and most other money market instru-

Meuts.
And the git-edged market has recently been in the dold-rums, with prices falling and the yield rising in a way to suggest that the brave new world to which we were all looking forward at the turn of the year was nothing more than the year was nothing more than an interesting illusion.
In fact there is no reason yet to get too worried about the performance of gilt-edged prices, since the explanation for their fall is simple enough: some sellers and very few

I wouldn't, though, be think-I wouldn't, though, be thinking of purting new money lato

Wait until the surumn, by which time the present glushould be out of the way, and prices might have dropped still turther. By that time, too, you will be in a better position to judge whether British interest rates will be pushed up in order to support sterling on a poor outcome to the phase three pay negotiations and/or any rise in rates in America.

What, in the meantime, are you to do with your money? Well, you certainly don't want to leave it sitting in the bank. Since the gross-up return to depositors in a building society investment account has only dropped to 10 per cent (assuming a 33 per cent basic tax rate), the choice lies between that and the National Savings Bank investment account, which provides the same return The other super-safe alteris, of course local ty negotiable bonds. authority However, the coupon on one year bond was set a week ago at only 91 per cent; and since the local authorities are trying to lengthen the term of their borrowings, and fewer want one-year money, I wouldn't expect it to rise when the next tranche is issued on Tuesday.

Longer dated "negotiable" bonds offer better returns, but the grouble is; they're not as "negotiable" as all that. Al-though there has been a big increase in the numbers of these three, four and five-year bonds issued in recent months, they're still only a very small part of the total local authority negori-able bond market, and if you try to sell them shead of their term you might very well have to do so at an unfavourable price. So if you want to be able to get at your monys in a hurry, stick with the building society. If it's not so important, then some local authorities are offering relatively attractive rates on their so-called "mortgages" which are not negotiable. Again, this is not the medium for an investment of anything less than a year, since the best you'll get on anything less than £50,000 is 94 per cent (from Mant).

But North Wiltshire is offer-ing 11 per cent on a minimum of £500 on a two-year view, and Swanses will give you 12 per cent on a minimum of £12,000 for three years. Assuming that you can lock your money away for four to seven years. Hun-tingdon will give you 121 per-cent for it on a minimum invest-ment of £500. If, however, you are prepared shire and North-East Fife).

If, however, you are prepared to lock your money away for that long, then I really think you would do better to put it into a local authority stock—say the GLC 12! per cent 1983. It will yield you much the same, but if interest rates come down enough by the turn of the decade to make the income on either really attractive—and I think they will—then the latter will also provide you with an will also provide you with an option to take some attractive capital gains instead.

M&G RECOVERY FUND

ent advisers, M&G's Recovery Fund, designed to produce capital growth, ended March as Britain's best-performing unit trust over the 12-month and su-year periods. It has a policy of buying the shares of companies that have fallen upon hard times. Many of these companies recover, and through a process of careful selection M&G has been able to bring high rewards over the years to Recovery Fund investors. An investment of £1,000 at the time of the Fund's launch in May 1969 had, at the offered price on 9th June 1977, grown to £4,888 including reinvested income. During this period the F.T. Industrial Ordinary Index, which does not include reinvested income, has gone up by 9-1%.
Investors should regard unit trusts as a long-term investment and not suitable for money needed at The price of units and the income from them may go down as well as up.

Net income from the Fund's investments is automatically reinvested for your benefit and at the latest offer price of units of 244-4p on the 9th June 1977 the estimated current gross yield was 5-49%. Prices and yields appear in the F.T. and other leading newspapers daily. The price includes an initial charge of 34% and there is an annual charge of 1% (plus VAT).
You can buy or sell units on any business day.

Contracts for purchases or sales will be due for settle-ment 2 or 3 weeks late. The Trustee is Barclays Bank Trust Company Limited. The Fund is a wider range security authorised by the Secretary of State for Trade. Commission at 14% is payable to accredited agents.

TWO WAYS TO INVEST

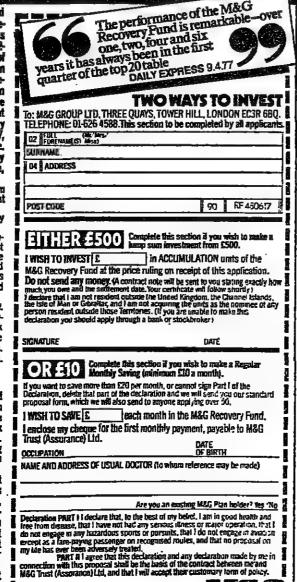

In addition to investing a capital sum as mentioned above you can start a Regular Monthly Saving Plan through a file assurance policy for as little as £10 a month, and you are normally entitled to claim tax relief at current rates of £17-50 for each £100 paid. On a £10 Plan, tax relief at present rates can bring down your net monthly cost to only £8-25, with which you buy units worth considerably more.

Regular investment of this type also means that you can take advantage of the inevitable fluctuations in the price of units through Pound Cost Averaging. which gives you a positive arithmetical advantage, because your regular invectment buys more units when the price is low and fewer when it is high. You also get life cover of at least 180 times your monthly payment throughout the period if your age at entry is 54 or under (women 58), and rather less up to 75.

If you cash into stop your payments during the first four years there is a penalty, and the tax authorities require us to make a deduction, so you should not consider the Plan for less than five years. 81% to 94% (depending on your starting age) is invested except in the first two years when an additional 20 per cent is Arter sit, it should be possible to decide on the information which would be needed. Each factor could be allocated a certain number of possis according to individual circumstances, with the premiums each year being calculated on the total being calculated on the total number of points. Each year, or more frequently, in the light of repair costs, the company could amend the premium perpoint which it would require.

In this way, having obtained information at the outset, the company's computer could calculate the premium needed each year to insure one's house, as happens at present with motor happens at present with motor

The advantage of this type of arrangement is that one does not have to calculate a sum insured, or risk the possibility of even a small claim being reduced as a result of under insurance. The instrance com-pany is saved administrative work, and knows that all policy holders, so far as possible, are paying their "fair share" to the pool of premiums.

Obviously, the floor area of house is important. So far, a lot of effort has gone into trying to devise a scheme for insuring contents, so as to eliminate the need to know the actual value at riskof information needed usually seems to be more complex than an estimate of the value of everything in the house. Nevertheless, insurers are continuing to work on this one. I hope they succeed; it could simplify this area of insurance.

Trading profits from iron and steel, etc., construction and engineering fell in the half-year, while those from motor vehicle distribution and industrial services were up. The board explains that in terest charges, though reduced by the rights issue in March last year, were affected by record interest rates at the time of the sterling crisis. Condi-tions in the iron and steel in-dustry are "the worst for many years" and there is as yet no sign of any improvement. However, the board is expecting a seasonal improvement on the first half in most of the group's construction interests, while the associates' contribution for the second half will be similar. In engineering, prospects depend largely on the flow of new orders and "can-not be helped by the commuing world-wide delay in the ordering of capital goods." Motors and industrial services will both have better second halves than last time. An unchanged interim dividend of

'Tanks' step Arthur Bell cash call in £5.3m rights issue

By Tony May The latest group to join the rights queue is Arthur Bell & Sons the Perth-based whisky group. The board proposes a one-for-five rights issue at 200p a share—which compares with 240p in the market after a 6p rise. The issue is simed at raising £5.3m and is underwritten by Morgan Grenfell.

Using the freedom that comes

Using the freedom that comes with the rights issue, the board is raising the dividend for the six months to June 30 from 4.97p to 6.69p gross and intends to pay a rotal of 14.72p gross by the end of June 1978. Miquel, chairman, says that despite the fall in market demand at home, the current year has started well in the scorch whisky division, and the progress achieved by the glass container division in the second half of 1976 is continuing in the current year. The board forecasts that pre-tax profits for the six months to June 30 of £3.6m, compared with £2.3m a year ago. With its markets continuing to expand, the group needs to doubles at £108,000 last time.

By Our Financial Staff

Following the record results of 1975-76, Tollemache & Cob-bold Breweries is still making progress. Indeed, pre-tax pro-fits for the half-year to March 31 more than doubled to £225,000, compared with tios,000 last time.

Turnover was up from £6.46m to £7.64m. In the year to September 30 last, pre-tax profits reached a peak £702,000 on a turnover of £14.2m. The big first-half rise stemmed mainly from the fact that the winter decline in beer sales was not repeated, the board explains. Sales of wines and spirits were also " considerably better and this particularly benefited the profits of Tollemache's retail shops. These factors have restored the profit to the levels of earlier years.

Raising the interim payment gross, from 1.53p to 1.84p, the board reports that the trade for the second half has started slowly due to the cold spring.

With the prospect of better weather, the outlook should improve, although the board finds that it is not possible to indicate the level of profits for the full year because of the sessonal nature of the business.

In the half-year, Tollemache rook credit for extraordinary items of £13,000, against £35,000 last year, being profits, less losses, on sales of properties,

On seles improved 18 per cent to £53,48m, pre-tax profit increased over 9 per cent to £7.73m. The current year has also started well for most divisions, the directors state, with the good pattern of denomal continuing for its wide range of products in most markets, including special items for the Silver Jubilee. Further progress is envisaged for 1977-78.

recent acquisition of SPR Investments—whereby an extra £4.49m cash was generated—the final dividend with Treasury consent has been rwised from 2.25p net to 3.7p. The total payout, as forecast, is lifted from 8.48p gross to 10.3p.

Interest charges are beavier, rising from £47.000 to £1.03m, and the net profit is improved from £4.8m to £5.72m.

RIGHLIGHTS FROM MR. BRYAN TOYE'S STATEMENT

RESULTS

The results for the year under review were very much as anticipated by the forecast I made last year and as confirmed by my half-year statement. The Group trading profit before taxation was £103,928 as com-pared with £24,831 in the pre-ceding year although extraordinary items added a further 551,346 to the profit. No Corporation Tax-is due on the profits earned in the United Kingdom on account of losses brought forward from the pas and stock relief: Total sales increased from £3.6m to £4.2m which is a reasonable improvement when taking price re-straint and the general level of the national economy into consideration.

DIVIDEND The Board recommends an increase in the dividend from 2.6% to 3.25% which equals an increase from 0.65p per share to 0.8125p per share, and the Treasury has given its approval to the increase.

FORECAST

Sales this year are going very well to date and I view better results in 1977 with some degree of optimism especially on account of H.M. The Queen's Silver Jubilee and the expected influx of foreign visitors. Additionally the major loss areas of the Group have been brought under control and great efforts are being made to improve those sectors producing a lower return on the capital employed. However the prosperity of your Company, and indeed that of our Country, is totally dependent upon the ability of H.M. Government to contin and meterially reduce the present disastrous rate of inflation, to create an atmosphere of Mappin and Webb is so often remember it as a gift shop which is not prohibitively expensive but which specializes classic objects like clocks, briefcases and handbags although you can also find some enchant- need to match can be forgotten. ing and outre objects there too.

Take this clutch of handbags. usually smaller and able to fit Two are of lizard and one of inside the briefcase or hang canvas with leather, which is either in shades of brown and cream or pavy and white. The main handbag colour and the edging trim can be reversed so that either brown or cream predominates or, obviously, either white or navy. This is the most expensive model, perhaps surprisingly, at around £45 but fitted gift chains allow these bags to be worn from the arm or shoulder by day and clusched, with the chain inside the bag, for evening or more its shape and can hardly date.

The classic one with handles and with the clip fastening at top is another that will never date and it is really excellent value at £19.50-I think you would find it difficult to see its equivalent at that price elsewhere. Of lizard on an excellent strape for literally years, it is in black, pavy or brown and should pre-empt the need for any other bag. The price is £19,50 and it will take you to Ascor or, less formally, to meetings on Ascot Heath.

I know that many of you will not want a lizard bag unless reassured that the lizards are "farmed" so as to ensure their continued existence, being concerned with preserving all species on this earth. Others. will need to be reassured that the lizards are humanely reared and killed. They are.

For those who are content to know these facts, let me add that the handbags have matching briefcases-for those who still could not use or wear synonymous with silver and lizard at any price, read on lewelry that all too few people The briefcases are also of lizard with rather fine markings, not of the same rather more familiar lizard as the handbags but in classic designs and, often, you can often do without a handbag when needing to use a briefcase, so the idea that they As for men, their handbags are from the wrist. The briefcases are beautifully fitted inside, trimmed with smooth leather and finished off with combination locks. No for keys, only for & need memory for the numbers which make up the opening combination. There are ways of ensuring that nobody else finds the combination-what do we all do about our backing cashcard numbers? I am certainly not telling how mine are recorded. The briefcase costs .£79.95; formal times. This bag keeps regrettably, £80 is a fairly average price for better brief-book). For much cheaper and functional briefcases, if Mappin's will forgive me, go to W. H. Smith which usually has a frame that will help to keep the really good selection. Boots, in their larger stores, does pretty well and so do some of the luggage shops.

cases. Find them at all branches of Mappin and Webb around

Britain (see the local telephone

You can buy matching belts at Mappin's at £18 for doublesided designs so that you can turn the belt to brown or beige, to brown or block, to navy blue or red and so on-that, to me, seems expensive bur good belts with good buckles are beginning to cost a lot everywhere. Curiously, I think that many of the familiar medium prices are disappearing and we are stuck with little choice between what is really inexpensive—the word "cheap" is no longer possible—and whar is really expensive but good value. Sadly for the many who cannot afford them, the quality lines are often the best value, but what do you then do about the vagaries of fashion except settle for the permanent, classic, dateless

I promised a word for those who will not wear lizards even when the reptiles are humanely farmed I am sure that most already know about Beauty without Cruelty of 40 Marylebone High Street, London, W.1. They compile lists of cosmetics contain no animal ingredients and of synthetic materials which involve no killing for "furs", simulated leathers and suedes, etc. Tele-phone 01-486 2845 for details. Just one word of warningplease do not write to me if you feel intolerant about lizard handbag-lovers on the basis of live and let live. I am here to serve as many tastes and con-sciences as possible and I refuse to be name-called because I recommend good value in lizard bass.

While on this subject of conservation, I am a great devotee of the Conservation Society and believe in their credo that life depends upon subtle relationships between earth, water, air and sunlight so that all must be done that can be to preserve the proper balances. They build up a library of books, published by themselves or by better-known commercial publishers, on the subject of preservation but with an extraordinarily wide range of subjects and approaches.

The books are often sold at prices well below those in the shops—they send a cheeply pro-duced list of titles and you can help the Society's work merely by buying although many also subscribe—there is never the allghest pressure for subscriptions, by the way. The Society's artitude to town and home plan-ning is sensibly constructive rather than destructive, recognizing the need for building as much as the essential requirements of green open spaces. The Society is one organization, their hookselling division another, although the latter exists to help the former which is trying to teach us to help ourselves and our descendants. For book lists, write to Conservation Books at 228 London Road, Reading, Berkshire RG6 1AH. They can also give you the Society's address.

This is centenary year for Wimbledon, a special Jubilee of its own. The official souvenir programme of Wimbledon can be bought even if you do not go there. A well-produced and colourful book for all tennis lovers, it runs to 62 pages and the covers, including exticles and advertisements that are also useful. Buy it at W. H. Smith or Meazles shops for 90p or send £1 to Wimbledon 1877-1977, 35-36 Great Mariborough Street, London, W1X XO7. Make cheques payable to Wimbledon Centenary Maga-

Limited edition collectors might like to know of a Wimbledon centenary book by David Paradine Developments, whose reputation for superb production is widely known. Their 100 Years of Wimbledon is written by Lance Tingay, lavishly illustrated, and every copy is signed by Fred Perry. It costs £84.

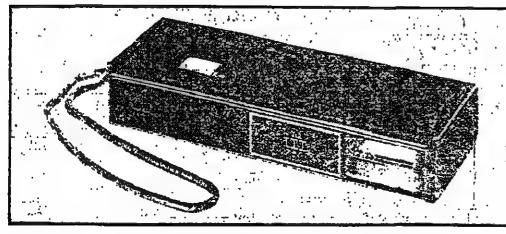

Details from DPD at Audley House, 9 North Audley Street, London, W1Y 1WF (01-629 3793).

One of the nicer Jubilee igs I have seen is hardly a Jubilee mug at all. It is made William Adams of Wedgwood group. A black design of a dancing cockney family in Pearly gear—King, Queen and presumably knave since one looks young and roguish, adorned in their pearly putfire are in closer black and outfits, ere in clossy black and white on a white ground, Dis-tinctive and different, it costs L40 and will be sold only during Jubilee year after which all appropriate artwork will be destroyed. From many leading department stores and Wedg-wood stockists.

Buy your own tea chest, or its little replica as photoits kittle replica as photographed here. It holds lib of team which I confess to not having mated and about which I have little information except that it is a high-quality ten non on sale in these chests from top hotels and airports and has been air-freighted from Kenya. But it is a lovely pack and would make a pleasing wift at £3—the wooden box has a foil lining so the tea must be worth proper keeping. Marketed by the London Tea and Produce Company, 9 Gee's Court, Oxford Street, London W1.

A Kodak devotee from way subjects. And she did manage back, despite my attempts to prove to them that I can be a fool with a foolproof camera, I was interested when my aide, Doreen, tried out a new Magicflash camera from

ITT Photo Products. She did well, too. True, she managed to get some devastatingly uninteresting backgrounds like a plain garden tence and a line of washing which did little for her to get her people to one side of an otherwise not very pretty scene. She has obviously been doing what I used toalthough I have tried to improve since the days of costly film.

But this I must say, Her photos were excellent, with everything in sharp focus and with superb colour, all automatically done for her inside the little, slim pocket camera with its own built-in flash. The fact that it works on inexpensive batteries means that it gives the equivalent of one "free" flash picture in every five. Magicflash cost £29.95 and is a neat little thing especially when you do not have to carry the flash bulb about. Between now and the end of August, you might qualify for £1 discount since coupons are appearing with the advertisements entitling buyers to just that. It is at Boots, major chemists and camera

 Handmade leather bandbags are rarely fashionable things, but they can look very sportifs and sturdy, good for fishing days or county shows and the like. Handmade satchels and granny begs, plus other carrying bags, can also be imbied with a certain rugged charm but I would go for the formal, machined learner variety myself, unless I loved working with leather and I had lots of spare time and no money instead of too little of either

If you want to try your hand at leather, there are plenty of craft shops for you but few that speciarize like the leathergoods and luggage firm of Burrow Hepburn. This company opened a craft shop, indeed a craft division, as a natural offshoot of its large commercial enterprise.

The Leather Store is at 205 Kensington High Street, London, W8, fast becoming a kind of craftsman's Mecca with Reeves, and others, nestling among the larger shops and with a wonderful branch of The Booksmith, that place for bargain books, handy for works of reference. I remember when the Barkers-Ribs end of Ken High was the busy and fashionable end. Busy it still is but the shops down towards the Commonwealth Centre (where Oxfam has a superb branch) and the Earls Court Road has become the exciting end nowadays so that even going to Rymans for new typewriter ribbons can be fun.

At the Leather Store, you might start with a very simple but effective moccasin kit in any size and starting at £4.95 which may sound a lot but which does contain everything you need except your own labour for a very good pair of ankle-high moccasins. Belts are good, too, as are some of the buckles and fastenings. You can buy everything you need in the way of punches and tools and kits for the young which feature Wild Bill Hickok's styles and a holster. You can make sandals and, oddly, leather Delmations (in kit form) or shearts for the knives I am sure you regularly carry. I can laugh since my favourite kitchen knife is a hunning knife that hangs in a leather sheath.

I like the idea of making shoes for bables or early toddlers as more or ginal presents than the eternal knitted jacket; and I love, for the young and slender, the Indian-style fringed skirts as well as the carved leather with sculpture-looking flower or other patterns that need a lot more skill with hands than I could ever achieve. They run an efficient mailorder service so you can buy from all over Britain if you write for the catalogue and you can even sew suede and leather on your machine, using the needles they recommend and designing the pattern to include a good deal of thonging because it looks nice and is strong.

No leatherwear is cheap but you would find that a good pair of suede trousers made of components from Barrow Hepburn would work out at around £20 while a tougher, easier-to-maintain leather pair would be about £30. The tabard in the photograph, ideal for men or women, boys or girls, is about £10 or £15 white the skirt works out around £25 and £35. Bikinis in suede are adorable for the thin and start from about £4.75 while plain fringed tunic tops or tank tops are from about £8 to £10.

For those with the right figure for suede or leather, Midnight Blue has just the right sort of clothes.

Their jeans are from above £10 to £25 but are ready very good. I speak as one who haces jeans, but then I could not wear them. Their separates are many and varied, or all price ranges except the very cheap, but including the different, delightful and rather expensive. There are masses of French and Italian styles, very much for lefspre wear as long as you think that must be chic, for chic is Midnight Blue's style and their taste is good. Some of the clothes are mildly outrageous some just pretty, most of them as much fun as the shops which do crease an easy, released and enjoyable atmospher Midnight Blue? Because two of the shops stay open until midnight and the atmosphere is best after normal shopping hours. The two are at 76 Old Brompton Road and at 186 Fulliam Road, London. The third branch, at 90 Brompton Road, closes at 6 pm but is near enough to its later stablemate for that to be no disadvantage at all. They all open at 10 am.

You can make your own leather lines and be delighted with the work and the results. Or you can go to Loewe and buy the most wonderful, supple, colourful clothes anywhere in leather or suede. Much as we must admire the handicraft from Barrow Hepburn, a giance at the same model girl in a Loewe suit and coat-dress with a lot of character stitching will show at once, even in black and white and without too much detail, what the difference really is.

One-off furniture

In theory, anyone can have anything. But unless you're an oil shakh, or you need something in vast quantity-like the National Theatre needed 5,000 square yards of specially-woven carper -in practice lesser mortals have, on the whole, to take what they're given.

There are exceptions, however. In an age of mass production, you can still get a surprising number of things made just for you-your size, your snape, your colour. Here's a sample of firms who seill make "one-off furnishings to order.

long dimensions or other peculiarities may need a special weight partners, too, may need a bed that's firmer one side than the other. Heal's are the bed people par excellence—in fact hey started life as bed-makers. They still, amazingly enough, have their bed-making workshop behind the shop in Tortenham Court Road, WI, and they will make any bed or mattress to order—extra tirm, extra soft (or even half-and-half). long, high, fleece-filled, hair-filled. You need to wair six or seven weeks for your bed to be made, and to pay from £256 for a firm-edge single divad, or from £485 for a firm-edge double. Delivery is nationwide and beyond, free under 25 miles.

Heal's will also make bedding to order: fitted sheets, duvet covers, valances, even circular sheets. They make them from standard sheets or from fabric by the yard, neither of which need necessarily be bought from them. Making up charge for an ordinary fitted sheet or a duvet cover is $7.75—that is plus material.

Duvets can be ordered too, with any natural filling, in any weight and any size. They're expensive, but worth knowing about if you must have a particular size, or want a very linearity in the control of the control o ightweight one for summer. Bedlam, at 114 Kensington Church Street, London, W8, run a different kind of madeto-measure service, being concerned with bed frames rather than with nuances of mattress more or less any pine bed, and they will get it made. One speciality is their high-level bed, on top of a wardrobe-anddesk arrangement. This can be made any size, and would cost around £450—which rather includes. figure virtually remember, virtually three pieces of furniture in one. They are also very willing to vary the size of their standard beds.

Orders have to come from within reasonable striking distance, for beds that need measuring up and fitting on

All window blinds must of course, be made to fit their particular windows, and any department store will provide that service, but the choice of pattern will be limited to manufacturers' ranges.

The firm of Sander-Shade, at 220 Queenstown Road, London, SW8, will make blinds, whether the roller or folding Roman variety, from any fabric under the sun, even felt or lace. There is a large choice of basic trims but, if you want something different like gathered broderie anglaise, tney will oblige so long as they are provided with the raw materials. You must go via a shop or decorator (the go via a shop or decorator (the John Lewis or House of Fraser stores, many small soft furnishers), not direct. Price varies shers), not direct. Price varies according to whether the blind is stiffened or more expensively "laminated" with backing: a 4ft blind with a 5ft drop would £27.53 or £39.89 plus the Harris of Living Daylights, 119 Regents Park Road, London, NW1, will hand-paint blinds with any picture you fancyyou can conjure up a beautiful view, for example. Their colour ochure will give you an idea of their work. On a practical note, the paint dries waterproof and spongeable, so you can clean the blind when necessary. A basic 4ft blind with a 5ft drop costs £10 plus the artwork, which averages around £25 for a one-off design. They will send work anywhere, but carriage of course is extra.

You don't, in fact, have to order as much carpet as the National Theatre did to get a firm to make you a special colour or pattern! Wilton Royal, whose factory is at Wilton, Salisbury, will weave carpet in any colour, any quantity, though for orders under 25 linear yards (27 or 36in wide) there is a surcharge of £30. This may be worth paying, however, if you simply need a few extra yards to match up when you move house, or to replace carpet that has been damaged. Their plain Wistons in damaged. Their plain Wittons in heavy domestic quality cost from fil sq yd upwards. The firm is equally flexible about weaving their patterned Wittons in any colour—the same minimum-yardage rule applies.

You can order these specials" through any amenable carpet retailer, and deli-very should take from four to seven weeks.

Steeles Carpets, of Banbury, will similarly make up their patterned carpets in any of their 60 standard colours; they will also make special colours for a £30 surcharge, on top of their normal £14 a sq yd for a heavy domestic grade. They will even make you a special pattern provided you order at least 40 linear yards (27in wide): only the area of a moderatesized room. There is a design fee depending on pattern size—likely to be about $40. Again, you order through a good carpet specialist.

Cooker Hoods
A one-off extractor hood is a stainless steel, and will send a quote on receipt of a sketch with measurements. Prices are from £100, including the extractor fan.

So far this new and fairly. small venture has dealt mainly with local orders—within 30 or 40 miles—but delivery farther afield can be arranged.

Petit Roque, at 5a New Road, Croxley Green, Herrfordshire, have branched out from firehave branched out from fire-places, still their main business, to cooker boods, which they make in copper, brass, black-metal, or stainless steel. They will either design from scratch (for which they charge a non-returnable design fee) or they will follow your specifications. Send these to them for a quo-tation. Prices are from £100.

Peter Boswell, of 67 Beak Street, London, W1, is primarily an antique restorer, but skilled cabinet-making—particularly copies of old pieces of furniture—is a natural part of his business, too. He can make a matching dining chair if you are show of a full cet. are one short of a full set, copy the missing partner of a pair of pier tables . . . you name it. He was recently asked to quote for copying a solid ivery chair. A more down to earth managany diving chair might cost anything from £100 to £250 or more, depending on complexity. You can send a drawing or a photograph for a quotation, but if the farm is to match up an actual piece, they need the original to work from Piercey, Biggs & Rackstraw, of Deshwood Avenue, High Wycombe, make traditional dinwycombe, make traditional din-ing chairs. These days there is such a demand for their stan-dard designs, they bother less with "specials" than they did-once, but they will still do one if pressed, depending how busy they are. So if you are patient (delivery is measured in months rather than weeks) and sufficiently properties. months rather than weeks) and sufficiently prosperous, they might make you a beautiful copy of a dining chair. The cost will vary according to complexity, of course, but might be from f100 to £300 and upwards—only worth doing if you have a gap in a valuable set.

More down-to-earth, made-tomeasure doormats (essential if you have an odd-shaped doormat well) can often be ordered from workshops for the blind in many big towns. The Royal National Institute for the Blind has a showroom at 224 Great Portland Street, London W1, and shops in Winchester and Reigate. You can either call in, or write with your order to the RNIB Home Industries Department, Akma Road, Reigate, Surrey. The RNIB are also the biggest basket-makers in the country: they make everything from bicycle panniers to hot-air balloon baskets. Again, call at one of the shops, or write with a drawing and measurements of what you want to Reigate, but be prepared to wait up to.
three months for a special basket. Doormats are quicker—up to three weeks. Both can be sent to you by post.

The small family firm of R. Wilkinson & Son, 45 Wastdale

Road, London SE23 specializes in matching up old pieces of glass: making replacement parts for chandeliers, for instance, or re-making claret jugs to fit existing silver tops. They will make a single wine glass, indeed they often do, but point out that this is only worth doing to complete a valuable antique set, since making the "blank" glass costs £20, and the cutting a further £5 or £10. At present, they have all the work they can handle, so be Beardmores will make "any-thing and everything that's made of brass." They make two provisos: if people want some-thing special they must be pre-pared to wait for it and pay for it. "Everything" has infor it. "Everything" has in-cluded, in the recent past, a 11-ton brass door for a shaikh's palace, and minute components for jewelry. More usually, they will make their elegant brass fenders any length, for around £80 (very popular these, so there is a three or four mouths' wait); brass grills to size, for disguising radiators, hi-fi speakers or whatever; light fittings; cabinet handles; With fittings: cabinet handles. With hese, the exercise is very much cheaper if you can let them have an original handle to use as a pattern; starting from scratch is prohibitive. It may well be, though, that their vast range of standard bandles will provide just what you are looking for. Beardmores have branches at 120 Western Road, Brighton; 49 Park Street, Bristol; and 3-5 Percy Street, London W1

There are one or two manufac-turers who, while selling cupboards off the peg, will make special sizes and shapes to order—special heights, too, the tall and the short will be pleased to hear. One such is C. F. Putterill Ltd, Grove Road,

Above left: Ceramic tiles printed by World's End Flooring match a carpet designed by Resnick. World's End can match tiles to fabric, wall paper, and so on, or design you some from scratch. Harpenden, Hertfordshire. They make pine kitchen cuptoards, adding around 15 per cent to their normal price for specials though, as Mr Potterill says, "if they want something very peculiar, they'll have to pay a peculiar price." Since no cuptoard is made until ordered, height can be varied between 32 and 36in without surcharge. Putterill's will also make their pine tables, benches and dressers to special sizes. They have an illustrated brochure, have an illustrated brothure, and will arrange delivery said where, though beyond the Home Countries there is an extra
